Mr. Kahn Has a Plan

Coolidge Says No, No, No

Gandhi Brings Two Goats

Would You Live Forever?

— By Arthur Brisbane —

OTTO H. KAHN, possessing more thinking power than the average man with fifty millions or so, has one of the many plans "to end the economic slump."

He would do something about the tariff.

He would amend the Volstead act, while waiting to get rid of the Eighteenth Amendment. (That would be a long wait.)

He advises governmental economy.

He urges the government to be generous in its aid to the idle, but to watch the spending of government funds closely.

He warns against reckless taxation that discourages enterprise. There we hear "the honest watch dog's bark, bay deep mouthed welcome, as we draw near home."

Nobody has a real plan yet, and you cannot have a plan, when the industrial, financial and government forces of a nation work haphazard, with no co-ordination, no co-operation. You cannot have a plan, where there is no planning, and everyone rushes on faster and faster until the smash comes.

For one thing, you may write it down, that the AVERAGE man, not merely the union mechanic or Wall Street broker, shall have decent pay for his work, and security in it.

In every direction our system of DISTRIBUTION is imperfect, and in nothing as imperfect as in distribution of the nation's wealth. Let the average worker earn more, spend more, buy more, use more, and keep out of the country, by tariff or otherwise, whatever competes unfairly or harmfully, with those that live here.

Our best minds should pay attention to Deterding, Dutch-British oil man, who advocates bi-metallism, letting silver resume its place as money, instead of making gold the only standard, thus destroying the buying power of eight hundred million human beings.

High finance cannot sneer at Deterding, for in finance, industry, business and the power to grab things, all over the world, Deterding has taught not one, but 100 lessons to our hardest boiled financial geniuses, the oil men. They shiver and show their upper canines when they hear the Dutchman's name.

Calvin Coolidge is said to be much annoyed by numerous backers and organizations that talk about "drafting" him as prosperity's choice for 1932."

Mr. Coolidge is sincere in his annoyance and his common sense tells him that if he did run, he would find himself more seriously annoyed than at present.

One who has hit the bull's-eye repeatedly, never a miss, would be foolish to re-enter the contest now, with the target hidden behind a mountain of depression.

Gandhi leaves India for England, taking for wardrobe, a loin cloth, for nourishment, two female goats that give milk, and for occupation, a contrivance for making cloth by hand.

And such is the power of sincerity, that this half-starved, penniless man will be received with honor and respect not accorded to any rajah, glittering with jewels and enriched by millions that British rule helps him to extract from miserable natives, as his sword helped him to extract them before the British came.

Perhaps you read here a suggestion that mysterious rays, Alpha, Beta, Gamma, etc., able to penetrate our tissues, without destroying them, might prolong human life.

The learned Dr. Stoklasa, serious scientist and radium expert, tells the Congress of Radiologists in Paris that the rays may prolong human life indefinitely.

Old age means "simply a state in which the tissues of the body have become deoxidized and the state of complete deoxidization is death."

Alpha rays arrest this deoxidizing process, Beta and Gamma rays oxidize the tissues, giving them new life.

No calamity could be greater than making life last forever.

Imagine a world peopled by ten billion human beings, all too old to have children or accept a new idea.

While waiting for "youth from radium," the wise man will recalcitrize himself with deep breathing, open windows, and exposure of his body to the sun's rays.

Rejuvenation by radium would be at least more welcome than the Voronoff method, via the glands of goats or monkeys. An old man, anxious to revive energy that will let him continue playing the fool, is a sad sight.

NEW DUPES OF BLUEBEARD FOUND

WRONG YOUTH WOUNDED BY GIRL'S DAD

Cambridge Man Fires 5 Shots at Pair He Thought Had Been With His Daughter

Believing two men who parked their auto in front of his home early today had induced his daughter to remain away from home, Michael Zarrill, 42, of Donnell st., Cambridge, fired five shots into the car, wounding one youth badly, according to Cambridge police.

According to the girl's mother, keeping of the daughter away from home by some youth occurred several weeks ago, but the daughter, since early in August, has been married to a John Demeo of Cambridge.

The injured man was found later lying unconscious in a nearby street with a bullet wound in his right thigh. He was taken to Cambridge City Hospital where he was identified as Michael Lancelotti, 18, of Brattle st., Arlington.

His name was placed on the danger list and it is feared he may die. Zarrill was arrested, charged with assault and battery with a loaded revolver.

Arraigned in East Cambridge District court, Zarrill pleaded guilty. His case was continued until Sept. 9, and bail was set at $5000. A plea to retract his guilty plea was denied.

Police say the shooting was a case of mistaken identity as neither Lancelotti or his companion, Michael Massucci, 38, of Dane st., Somerville, were acquainted with Zarrill or his daughter, Angelina, 17.

LEAGUE ARMY PROPOSED TO WORLD

M. Paul Boncour, the French Leader, Predicts Drastic Peace Move in 1932

Paris, Aug. 31 (AP)—A proposal that the nations of the world place their armed forces under control of the League of Nations and a prediction that France would lead the way for this at the 1932 disarmament conference was made today by Joseph Paul-Boncour, foreign affairs chairman of the Chamber of Deputies.

M. Paul-Boncour is acknowledged as France's greatest authority on disarmament and is certain to be one of France's chief delegates to the disarmament conferences in Geneva next February.

The impression prevailed that he would not have made his statement unless he was convinced it harmonized with responsible opinion in France.

His statement made to the Associated Press is considered to be of such far-reaching importance that it will give an entirely new angle to the struggle for the reduction and limitation of armaments.

CHALLENGE TO WORLD

"When the disarmament conference agrees upon the actual figures of the defense strength of each country," he said, "our idea is that these forces should cease to be left entirely to the disposition of these countries.

'COW FACE' HAD PLANS FIXED FOR WEDDINGS

"Bluebeard" Is Still Receiving Mail From Dupes; Gas Mask Points to Lethal Scheme

Pictures on Pages 2 and 3

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 31—Two women, and perhaps a third, today appeared to have had narrow escapes from the wiles of Harry Powers, "cow face" Bluebeard, who admits killing two women and the three children of one.

Powers had a system—scientifically kept files plus a code—which lay behind the synthetic love epistles with which he courted hundreds of romance-stricken women, it was revealed today.

One woman, a widow from upper New York state, was to have married him last Wednesday. All three were listed as his "brides." And dates were fixed.

Other developments were:

1—Finding of a gas mask indicates Powers may have planned lethal deaths for his victims.

2—Powers is a "sadist" and otherwise abnormal, but legally sane, says noted psychiatrist. His lawyer says he will plead insanity.

3—Letters and forms found indicate Powers had 115 women on his list. Police believe other bodies will be found.

4—His loves were graded and coded by an ingenious system. The victims were worked up to a proposal according to the tone of their letters.

5—Powers posed as "Rudolph Valentino, II," and quoted the screen star in many ways.

6—He had a fetish for the hair of women, and wrote a long

7 BOYS DODGE POLICE CHASE

Not only one child, but seven, led them early today in Wakefield, when seven boys about 15 years old each, outwitted Wakefield and Reading police in a wild automobile chase and escaped after ditching a stolen car.

Eight shots were fired over the speeding machine by Patrolman Edwin Rowe to scare the boys. When he finally raced up beside the stolen car, the youthful driver swerved and nearly crowded him off the road.

Then the wild juveniles tossed the pieces of glass back along the road, in an attempt to puncture tires of the pursuing officer's car.

Rowe jumped out at a police box and asked his station to notify Reading to block off the boys.

By the time Reading police reached the road, however, the boys had abandoned the car in a ditch and escaped.

New York, Aug. 31 (INS)—A final accounting of the $239,301,017 estate of Harry Payne Whitney, filed here today is believed to be the largest ever recorded in America.

Lewis Case Ledyard, Lewis Case Ledyard, Jr., and the United States Trust Co. of New York, as executors, showed the estimated value at the time of Whitney's death, May 25, 1927, was 186,579,746 but they realized $7,414,838 profit on property sold and securities increased in value by $45,306,372.29.

Inheritance and other taxes paid the federal government and states including New York, Maine and Ohio totaled $22,179,274.

Helen Hay Whitney, the widow, received the largest single legacy, $811,282 and three friends, Eugene Hale, Samuel A. Clark and Finley Peter Dunne, noted humorist were willed $500,000 each.

SIX ESCAPE AS BOAT BURNS

Sunapee, N. H., Aug. 31 (AP)—Six persons, all socially prominent residents of New York City, swam to safety in Lake Sunapee early today as a power cruiser owned by W. W. Davies, 2d, caught fire and burned. Those aboard the boat were Mrs. Davies, Mrs. Fred Johnson, Anthony C. Pearson and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Durant. Mrs. Durant, Mr. Davies and Mrs. Johnson are sisters.

The accident occurred several hundred yards from shore while the lake was in darkness. Flames from the burning boat were seen by Charles W. Rowell and, with Raymond Haven, he went to the assistance of those in the water.

Pearson was slightly burned about the hands, while the others suffered only temporary effects from immersion. All were house guests at the home of W. W. Davies, first, wealthy soap manufacturer.

The boat was a 24-foot craft, which had just been built, and was valued at $2,000.

RUEL IS TRADED FOR M'MANUS

The Red Sox today announced the trade of Catcher Harold "Muddy" Ruel to the Detroit Tigers in exchange for Marty McManus, veteran infielder.

Waivers had been asked on both players. The Bengals refused to waive on Ruel and the Sox claimed McManus.

Each player will join his new club tomorrow.

Los Angeles Pays New England Visit

Making compass calibrations, the Navy dirigible Los Angeles cruised over southern New England today. The big dirigible passed over New Bedford at 11:40 a. m. and then swung down over Cape Cod, being sighted over Provincetown shortly after noon.

The Los Angeles, which left Lakehurst, N. J., at 7:20 a. m., is due back there before dark.

Another Woman With Powers in Uxbridge

Uxbridge, Aug. 31—The web of death that Harry F. Powers of Clarksburg, W. Va., spun with honeyed words and phrases culled from famous love stories, may have ensnared another woman in this vicinity, in addition to Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, police believe.

While here last month courting Mrs. Lemke, since a victim of his murderous ardor, he entertained a younger woman at tea in the Uxbridge Inn, it was revealed.

Mrs. Hattie Jouett, manager of the inn, told Police Chief Patrick F. Carmody today of the incident, and investigation was launched to determine her identity and to learn if she, too, was slain.

YOUNGER WOMAN

According to Mrs. Jouett, Powers first came to the inn July 12 and stayed one day. He returned on July 21 and remained overnight. It was on the second date that a well-dressed woman, somewhat younger than Mrs. Lemke, who was 40, paid him a visit.

Both Mrs. Jouett and Joseph Baraclough, clerk at the hotel, denied reports that Powers brought with him a bulky bundle which disappeared while he was here.

Accordingly Chief Carmody said he dropped investigation of these reports which had carried the im-letter on "Hair and Kissing," with explanations.

Powers today is kept under close guard from mob violence. Sheriff Grimm fears lynching.

Meantime a chain gang of convicts is digging about the "slaughter house" in the belief that more bodies of his love-victims will be found.

LETHAL DEATH HOUSE

Finding of a gas mask today caused authorities to believe that the basement of the garage may have been designed for asphyxiation of persons by means of natural gas.

There were gas jets in the air-tight basement of Powers' garage, but there were none in the garage above.

Powers was declared legally sane today by Dr. Edwin H. Mayers, of Pittsburgh, psychiatrist of the University of Pittsburgh.

"Powers knows right from wrong, but has been abnormal as a male since childhood," said Dr. Mayers after talking with the prisoner for two hours. "But he is legally sane."

Dr. Mayers said the murderer is a "sadist," deriving pleasures from inflicting suffering on those he loved.

"Anybody who would commit such a crime is insane," Powers today told Rev. T. E. Gainer, Baptist minister and his spiritual adviser.

An address book listing 42 names and the stub of a cancelled check book, apparently the property of Mrs. Lemke, of Uxbridge, Mass., was unearthed near the trench where the bodies of the victims were found.

A newspaper clipping was found containing the obituary of Mrs. Julia F. Wesson Whitin, 78, widow of George Minor Whitin, of North Uxbridge, Mass., who died on July 14, 1931. Police believe Mrs. Whitin was a friend or acquaintance of Mrs. Lemke.

RADIO IN HUNT

Detectives and postoffice authorities throughout the nation organized today to determine the fate of 115 other women who corresponded with Powers. Radio was also ordered used in this investigation, which will touch nearly every state in the Union.

The very day— Aug. 27—on which Pierson was arrested for the slaughter of Mrs. Dorothy Lemke, Mrs. [illegible] was [illegible] Miss Virginia Bell of Hagerstown, Md., "had a date" to go riding with him.

And Mrs. Bessie G. Storrs of Olean, N. Y., was due to meet the correspondence school Romeo today.

Mrs. Edith D. Simpson of Detroit, wrote warmly of wanting to meet Pierson.

VICTIMS ALL CODED

How did this fish-eyed, flabby-faced Powers with the heart of a fiend do it?

The code—found among the effects of the love butcher—apparently provided the key to his success.

Through an ingenious bookkeeping system, Pierson segregated various clippings from writers, articles and treatises on love, friendship, and other romantic subjects.

He culled from the world's authorities on psychology, philosophy and science. He underlined for ready use the smart sayings of famous humorists, the sparkling epigrams of poets and prostituted the thoughts and creative efforts of the great for his base ambitions.

His synthetic system of love-making, even went further. Pierson analyzed his victims, apparently, and gave each correspondent a different "treatment." However, each series of letters began at a certain tempo and worked up to a climax.

Number one to eight meant the initial state in his love-lettering. "03-4-5" meant high-tide in the correspondence.

Pierson kept a black code book with his records. Sometimes, as in the case of one of Miss Bell's letters, he would put his code on the back of the envelope.

LETTERS PRODUCED

While the digging went on it was revealed that some psychopathic perversion motivated him in his dealing with many women, as well as his apparent object of obtaining their money.

The authorities made this known when they produced a letter found in a trunk shipped here from the house of Dorothy Pressler Lemke, the missing Northboro, Mass., woman, believed to be one of Powers' victims.

With the bodies of five of the multiple murder victims already in the morgue, four of them those of Mrs. Anta Buick Eicher, Park Ridge, Ill., widow, and her three children, the authorities felt certain the bodies of more victims were still in the ground surrounding Powers' gruesome garage.

A detailed confession of the murder of Mrs. Eicher and of Mrs. Lemke amplifying the meager details he gave Saturday, was made by Powers.

"I got them all together about August in the sub-cellar of my garage out in the country and killed them all together.

"I strangled them with a rope."

"I put 15-year-old Grethe Eicher in one room, Harry Eicher, 13, and Ann'wel, 9, in another, and Mrs. Eicher and Mrs. Lemke each in a separate room."

He was hanging his head at times apparently studying his words.

"I killed Mrs. Eicher first," he went on. "I strangled her with a rope around the neck."

"Then I killed the two younger kids, the brother and sister.

"Harry Eicher heard his mother scream and put up a fight. I hit him on the head with a hammer to shut him up. Then I put the rope around his neck and strangled him.

"I then killed the older girl and Mrs. Lemke by strangling them."

Then I stayed with the bodies —No, I didn't mind it—until it was late and buried them in the sewer trench.

"You asked me if there are any more? No, that was the last—that's all there was at that place.

"They can dig if they want to, but that's all that's there."

Powers Took the Role of "Rudolph Valentino II"

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 31—Paraphernalia used by Harry F. Powers in operating his matrimonial agency has been found by police.

Powers tried to pawn himself off to many clients as "Rudolph Valentino II," the equipment reveals.

Among the numerous papers in the matrimonial equipment are several articles written by Valentino.

"I believe sex plays are mirrors of life and of good influence, says Rudy," heads one article.

Powers had other clippings and when they fitted into letters he was writing he included them to his clients.

The equipment was found in a handbag, with several form letters and a number of his photos.

One of the notes that fitted into his letters follows:

"It was brown with a golden gloss, my pet;
"It was fine as silk of the floss, my pet;
"'Twas a beautiful mist falling down on your wrist.
"'Twas a thing to be braided, and jeweled, and kissed.
"'Twas the loveliest hair, in the world, my pet."

"A kiss of the hair is a delicate gesture of adoration, the letter went on.

"It is a kiss which women love, not only because it is a kiss, but because it embodies a subtle tribute of the hair.

"It is a way of saying 'Your hair is beautiful; it is fragrant; it is gossamer.'

"In reality it may be stingy as hemp; as smelly with stale tonic, and gossamer only as a horse's tail—but the tribute is there just the same."

THE LOVE APPEAL

"Hair has invariably possessed an appeal for lovers, and the heart tangling of tresses has been a favorite figure of speech—no longer employed because you can not tangle a heart in a boyish bob.

"There is one occasion when a kiss of the hair may escape censure, when all other kisses are banned by the rules of good breeding. This is on the dance floor. It is then merely a brief and delicate brushing of the lips of the man against the wisp of hair which temple him by a mocking tickle of the ear.

"Here the kiss of the hair has its truly proper setting—soft lights, rhythmetic movements, sensuous movements.

"The kiss on the hair is an esthetic kiss, it is tender, whimsical, reverential.

"It is not so cold as a kiss of the hand nor as ardent as the kiss of the lips.

"A kiss on the hair is often a kiss of humility. Hence it may not be grabbed nor stolen, with snatching chrism.

"Hair-pulling, often, is a kiss of wistfulness. It is given by a man to a woman he holds in such reverential awe that he is afraid to kiss her."

MAN ON COPING 11 MINUTES TO FACES DEATH PROVIDENCE

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP)—Three hours and a half after his companion had been dashed to death to the ground 140 feet below, when a rope holding a scaffolding broke, James Kemp, 63, today held a precarious grip on a ten-inch ledge 12 feet from the top of the 120-foot chimney of the Taylman and Erbe Manufacturing Co.

While firemen stood below with out-stretched life nets, Kemp stood flattened to the chimney, his fingers just able to grasp the end of the rope that had broken and precipitated Gendolfo di Primo, 50, to the ground.

Don't say, "It can't be done," until you've tried a Want Ad.

Making an average speed of 240 miles an hour, with six passengers and a full load of 108 gallons of gasoline, J. J. Harrigan, piloting a Lockheed Orion, made the 44-mile flight from Boston to Providence in 11 minutes.

Harrigan had never flown to Providence before, but made the flight to the Rhode Island city in 16 minutes. Circling the railroad station, he hung the throttle of the 450 horsepower Wasp "against the peg" and the big low-wing monoplane began rocketing for Boston at four miles a minute with the wind on its tail.

LETTERS BARE TRICKERY OF POWERS IN LURING VICTIMS

Following is a letter sent by Harry F. Powers, West Virginia's modern "Bluebeard," to Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke of Northboro and Worcester. It is the same type he sent to other women he attempted to lure to him, with matrimony as a bait.

Mrs. Lemke was the recipient of the following letter, among others; in which he used Havelock Ellis' work on the "Psychology of Sex," as one means of exciting her interest.

"As I have a little spare time I will spend it by writing a few lines. I want to say that I was very much impressed with your appearance when we met yesterday.

"You are certainly a very well-preserved woman of your age, and for one who has gone through what you have you look real healthy and wholesome and to my way of thinking just the right size and weight. I never did take any fancy to slim women, but prefer a woman to be real plump.

"I suppose that you have already begun the books I gave you and I am sure you will find in them a great deal of valuable information. There is a chapter in Dr. Robie's book which I believe you will find in the index under the head of 'The Art of Love.'

"That one chapter is to my mind the most valuable part of the book. Dr. Robie, who is a very good friend of mine, tells me that since that book has been in circulation he has had letters from many ministers who have read the book asking if he would have that chapter printed in pamphlet form.

"They say that they would like to get that chapter by itself in pamphlet form so they might give one to every young couple they marry. I believe after reading that chapter on the art of love you will find the methods therein described far different from what you experienced in your marriage.

Offers Help on Long Words

"I have another book by Dr. Long of Peoria. Dr. Long's book gives things more clear and it is easier for a person who is not used to reading scientific books to understand, but he does not cover as much ground as Dr. Robie, his book being only about half the size.

"Now should you come across words that you do not understand just have a pencil and paper and write them down and inclose them in a letter to me so I can give you the definition to them before you return the books. Then when you get the meaning of the word you can refer to the paragraph and reread it and get its full meaning. To do this it will be necessary for you to keep a copy of the list of words yourself and opposite each word mark the book and page on which that word is used so in that way you can look up the place again.

"I know that you will find a good many words in the Havelock Ellis book that you will not understand, nor will you be able to find them in the dictionary for they are Latin words. In the back part of the Havelock Ellis book you will find a long list of sex histories of different people which are both interesting and instructive. Be sure to read the author's introduction to the chapter containing those histories and then you will understand why he had given them.

"A great many of the modern sex authors give many sex histories as that is an excellent way to study sex.

"When you have read some of these books I would like to suggest that we exchange our histories. I would be willing to tell you all of my experiences from my boyhood, which would give you a better idea of just what kind of a nature I have. And I would like to have your history as it would help me to better understand you. All the latest novels advise that every couple should before they finally decide on marriage to have a frank and plain talk to learn each other's natures. There are a number of reasons why some people are not suited for certain others of the opposite sex."

Ghastly in the menace hidden between lines portraying a kindly middle-aged benefactor and the love of children are the letters with which Powers lured Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher and her children to death in his stronghold.

Equally amazing is the correspondence of the murder fiend with a lonely widow in New York whom police believe he had marked out as his next victim.

The wholesale murder of the Eicher family apparently affected Powers for a few days, because he wrote to Mrs. Bessie G. Storrs, of Olean, N. Y., a letter suggesting that they call off their mail-order romance because he did not want her "to be a victim of mismarriage."

But later, after Mrs. Eicher and her children were buried and the danger of detection apparently had passed, Powers again wrote Mrs. Storrs, apologizing for suggesting that they end their romance.

PRAISES CHILDREN

Powers told of his love for children in a letter written to Mrs. Eicher after she sent him pictures of her son and two daughters whom he murdered a short time later.

"I am indeed very proud of Buster. He looks like a splendid young chap, and the two girls, too, they look like fine children. They will have opportunities that they deserve, and they will be able to develop into whatever their inclinations call for."

Powers possessed a sensitive streak of vanity, he revealed in another letter to Mrs. Eicher. He had sent her his photograph and she evidently complained that he was rather short in stature.

He wrote:

"Honey, dear, I know that I appear rather small in one picture—but the old gentleman was exceedingly tall. I told you I was 67 inches, dear. That makes five feet seven inches."

LETTERS TO WIDOW

All the while Powers was corresponding with Mrs. Eicher he was mailing promises of marriage and painting vivid pictures of romance to Mrs. Storrs.

Touching pleas to Powers to hasten his plans for marriage and bring her happiness were forgotten today by Mrs. Storrs as she announced her anxiety to see him brought to justice. She said:

"I would like to confront him and see what he has to say for himself."

The chain of endearing letters which Mrs. Storrs received from Powers stopped suddenly for a few days at about the time Mrs. Eicher and her children were murdered.

The slayer wrote to Mrs. Storrs:

"I guess we had better quit. We could not be able to agree. I want you to be happy. Forget me if you can, for I do not want you to be a victim of mismarriage."

The letter was mailed from Wilson Springs, Ill.

Then, a few days later, Mrs. Storrs received a telegram from the murderer. It said:

"Quit your nerves, dear. Everything is O. K."

The telegram was followed by a letter apologizing for ever suggesting that their romance be called off. Powers promised to come to Olean, August 26, when they would be married.

Mrs. Storrs last heard from Powers August 23. He said he would be in Olean in three days and planned a honeymoon to his ranch near Cedar Rapids. His arrest prevented the trip.

Brookline Surgeon Honored by Swiss

Dr. Harvey Cushing, of Brookline, chief surgeon of the Peter Bent Brigham hospital, was given an honorary degree by the University of Berne, Switzerland, today.

Dr. Cushing, one of the greatest surgeons in the country, was awarded the degree during the opening of the International Congress on Neurology at Berne.

Some years ago, Dr. Cushing was awarded an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws by Cambridge University, England.

Last year Yale University gave him the coveted Montclair Yale Bowl for 1930. One of Dr. Cushing's books, "The Life of Sir William Osler," won the Pulitzer prize some years ago.

Lady Astor's Seat in Parliament Menaced.

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—Nancy Lady Astor, the first woman to take a seat in the British Parliament, may be threatened with a Conservative challenge from her constituency at the next general election.

An advertisement in the personal column of today's London newspapers announces that a "gentleman of Plymouth, conscientiously believing that the present Parliamentary representative from the Sutton division should be opposed at the next election," would like to communicate with a gentleman who would be willing to oppose the present member as an independent Conservative candidate."

Parlor Piloting Aids Girl Flier in Training

New York, Aug. 31—Charlotte Hodgkinson, 19, amateur swimmer and diver, took her book on aviation down from its shelf, seated herself in a chair in her home and, with a broom as the "stick" of her airplane, soared off in glorious imaginary flights.

Her imaginary piloting was so good that at Curtiss Airport, Valley Stream, L. I., she made a solo flight after two hours and 27 minutes instruction yesterday in a real plane. It was a new record for women at the field.

Rum-Laden Hearse in Jovial "Funeral"

East Chicago, Ind., Aug. 31 (AP)—Policeman Ralph Hart did not understand why so many funeral corteges passed through here en-route to Indiana Harbor, which has no cemetery.

Today he stopped one hearse followed by several jovial looking mourners smoking cigars. Inside he found many cases of liquor. The driver was arrested.

Admiral McGowan's Widow Dies Abroad

Vichy, France, Aug. 31 (AP)—Mrs. John McGowan of Washington, D. C., widow of Rear Admiral McGowan, died here yesterday. Her body will be taken to Washington for burial beside her husband in Arlington Cemetery.

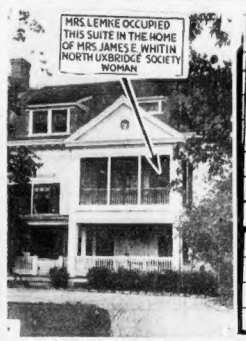
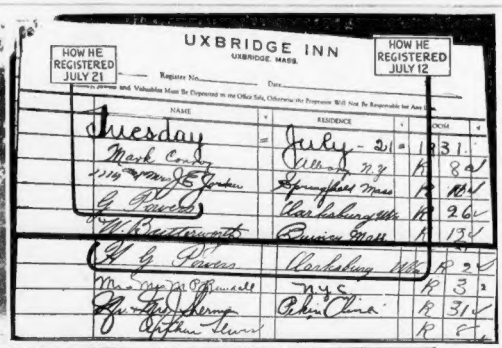
LOVELORN WOMAN PINNED HER NEW-FOUND FAITH IN 'COW-FACE' BLUEBEARD

Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke of Northboro, victim of Bluebeard slayer, is shown here in a recent photo. She accompanied the arch-killer on what she thought was a wedding trip, but which was a trip to the grave. This is an exclusive picture of Mrs. Lemke.



HOME OF VICTIM

...rs. Lemke was happy in her position on the beautiful estate of Mrs. James E. Whitin at Uxbridge before she began her correspondence with Powers.



During his "courtship" of Mrs. Lemke at Uxbridge, Powers stopped at the Uxbridge Inn, whose register bears the signature "G. Powers," and "H. G. Powers," as shown here. While at Uxbridge he called on Mrs. Lemke at the Whitin home and was introduced to her fellow employes. Later they warned Mrs. Lemke.

SIGNATURE OF DEATH

"I HIT THE BOY IN THE HEAD WITH THIS!"

Garroting was the form of death Powers chose for his lovemates. When he was strangling Mrs. Eicher her son Harry heard her scream and put up a fight. "I hit him on the head with a hammer to shut him up, then strangled him," Powers

Letters which Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke wrote to friends. In one she told of being disappointed in her marriage venture and of having left Harry F. Powers, the Bluebeard. 'FLAME' TO BE FREED ON BAIL

Central Falls, R. I., Aug. 31—A climax in the textile strike disorders was expected today when one woman was arrested and plans to bail Miss Ann Buriak from Cranston county jail were announced.

Sophia Urban, 33, of Cole st, Pawtucket, was arrested after she had stoned a bus loaded with workers on their way to the General Fabrics Mill. She was fined $20 by Judge Roscoe M. Dexter.

James T. Reid, president of the National Textile Workers' Union, announced Miss Burlak would be freed from jail in time to lead a mass meeting scheduled for tonight.

Rioting is expected when the General Fabric mill closes this afternoon.

In a dispute between police of this city and Pawtucket, Chief Joseph A. Chaput claims that a telephone call to Pawtucket police headquarters for additional police to patrol the city boundaries was unheeded. Pawtucket officials denied the charge, claiming that they have been escorting the chartered bus carrying workers.

In announcing the plan to free Miss Burlak, Reid said:

"We will get her out today, and we have delayed superior court action to have the bail reduced. Ten thousand dollars is no obstacle to us, for we could pay $25,000 or $50,000. Ann Buriak will be at that meeting tonight."

BANKS ASKED TO AID ON TAXES

Suggestion that savings banks, trust companies, co-operative banks and loan associations of Massachusetts increase mortgages of property owners who are unable to pay their taxes, and pay these assessments themselves, was made by Mayor Curley today.

In a letter to the directors of each of these institutions, he wrote:

"The list of properties submitted to me to be advertised for sale for non-payment of taxes numbers about 6500.

"Many persons whose properties have been advertised are not in a position to discharge their obligations to the city unless assisted by the institution holding the mortgages on these properties.

"It would be of immeasurable benefit to the owners if the banks would increase the mortgages in sufficient amount to cover the taxes, these taxes then to be paid by the banks and made part of the mortgage."

LINDBERGHS AT SQUID LUNCH

Tokio, Aug. 31 (AP)—The most brilliant midsummer affair of its kind here in many years—a dinner given by Premier Wakatsuki—tonight ended the ambitious round of official ceremonies in honor of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

The premier was not acting in his official capacity in entertaining the fliers, but rather in the capacity of a friend of Mrs. Lindbergh's father, Sen. Dwight W. Morrow of New Jersey, whom Wakatsuki met at the London naval conference.

Tomorrow the Lindberghs will go to Karuizawa, where they will be guests for several days at the summer home of Ambassador Forbes.

At a luncheon in their honor today the Lindberghs figuratively tasted victory. It was in the form of dried squid mixed with dried chestnuts. To the Japanese it signifies triumph and in ancient times they served it to their conquering heroes. It was served at a luncheon tendered the Lindberghs by the Japan Air Transport Company.

Lordships Coming to Ex-Labor Leaders Says Pastor

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—Rev. Dr. Harold T. Donaldson of Leicester, England, Congregationalist, believes J. Ramsay MacDonald and Philip Snowden, Labor party leaders, will be elevated to peerages.

"Remember my words," he said in a sermon at the Brick Presbyterian Church. "After the general election they will be elevated to the peerage, and will sit in the House of Lords. The people call them traitors, which is unfortunate. However, the laboring man cannot dissuade himself of the belief that Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Snowden have gone over to the moneyed interests."

Hindu-Moslem Riot Over Police Slaying

BISHOP'S ALL IS LEFT TO CHURCH

Nashua, N. H., Aug. 31 (AP)—The will of the Rt. Rev. George Albert Guerin, Catholic bishop of Manchester, filed for probate today leaves $1 each to his brother and sister and nieces and nephews.

The remainder of his estate is left Rt. Rev. Jeremiah S. Buckley, vicar-general of New Hampshire.

No inventory of the estate was filed with the will, and John Healy, Samuel H. Connor and James S. Cavanaugh, all of Manchester, were appointed to make one. Bishop Guertin died Aug. 8, four days after the will was drawn.

Bequeathing the estate to the vicar-general is equivalent to leaving it to the church, unrestricted as to use, it was explained today.

MISSING YOUTH FOUND AT HOME

Edgartown, Aug. 31—Search for William Franklin Paris, Jr., 15, member of a prominent Philadelphia family, who has been missing from his summer home here since Friday, ended today when it was learned he had been found in his home in Philadelphia.

When the youth was first missed a search throughout the Eastern part of the country was started. Lady Elisabeth Levering Butler of Bradford, Eng., and New York, the boy's aunt, gave instructions that no expense was to be spared to locate him.

The boy left here last Friday and boarded the boat to New Bedford, where the trail was lost.

RADIO REVEALS DEATH OF M. D.

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—Slumped on a settee, his hands tied behind his back with a handkerchief, Dr. William R. Hurst, 30-year-old physician, was found dead in his apartment early today.

He was clad in pajamas. The apartment was in disarray.

The physician's radio, which ran continuously yesterday afternoon and all last night, annoying tenants in his apartment building, led to angry demands this morning that the offending set be located.

Deciding the noise emanated from Dr. Hurst's apartment on the ground floor, employes kicked and telephoned without getting a response. They then opened the door with a pass key.

The cause of the doctor's death was not immediately determined.

YOUNG THIEVES' LOOT FOUND

Youthful thieves who cached $200 worth of loot in a dugout in Locust field, South Boston, broke into a drugstore at 754 Dorchester ave., South Boston, early today—and enjoyed ice cream and sodas while robbing the place.

A panel in a rear door was kicked in, leaving a hole big enough only for a small boy, but from the glasses and dishes left on the soda fountain police believe half a dozen boys to have been implicated.

In the Locust st. dug-out, several hours later, police found $200 worth of razors, soaps, rouge, candy, cigarettes and other articles that had been taken from the pharmacy, operated by John F. Fagan.

GRAF ZEPPELIN OVER ATLANTIC

St. Vincent, Cape Verde Islands, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Graf Zeppelin, on a non-stop flight from Friedrichshafen to Pernambuco, Brazil, was sighted over this city just before noon, flying south.

Berlin, Aug. 31 (INS)—The Graf Zeppelin, on her second transatlantic flight from Friedrichshafen to Pernambuco, Brazil, flew over the Canary Islands at 1:20 a. m. today, heading for the Cape Verde Islands, said radio messages to Berlin.

The Graf left Friedrichshafen last night at 9:30. The veteran skipper, Dr. Hugo Eckener said he expected to reach Pernambuco in 73 hours and, after spending a day there, he said, he would start homeward again.

Among the Graf's passengers is Herbert S. Siebel of Saginaw Mich.

'DICTATORSHIP' FOR BRITAIN

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Aug 31—A dictatorship for Great Britain, under Prime Minister MacDonald, loomed today if the Labor party attempts to block financial measures planned by the national emergency cabinet to balance the budget.

The cabinet is empowered, by "orders in council," to push through its measures, including reduction of the dole, governmental salary cuts and new taxations.

MacDonald returned today by plane from Scotland to preside at a full cabinet meeting.

He said he would ignore the demand of his constituents in Seaham Harbor that he resign his seat in the House of Commons. J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominions and colonies, today resigned as head of the National Union of Railwaymen.

New York to Shut Door on Hungry Out-of-Towners

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—Out-of-towners, unemployed or penniless, are not welcome in New York city this winter.

The city serves notice that it cannot and will not receive the usual winter parade of the hungry, drifting into the city for work or food and shelter usually furnished by some charitable organization.

The municipal lodging house is planning to care for 800,000 lodgers and to serve 3,000,000 meals this winter. That won't even take care of native New Yorkers needing that aid, let alone outsiders.

200 Hunt Firebugs in Idaho Forests

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 31 (AP)—Charged by Gov. C. Ben Ross with the duty of hunting out incendiarists accused of lighting fires in order to provide employment, 200 national guardsmen today patrolled the forests of Central Idaho, where flames which have raged two weeks were believed to have been halted.

WOMAN ADMITS 1 OF 12 KILLINGS

Detroit, Aug. 31—Duncan C. McCrea, assistant prosecutor, announced today that Mrs. Rose Veras, rooming house proprietor, held in connection with the deaths during the last eight years of 12 men in her home, had confessed she pushed one of them, Stephen Mak from an attic window, the fall causing his death, after attempts to poison him had failed.

Seventy-five life insurance policies were found in Mrs. Veras' home, several on lives of men who died there.

McCrea said she denied complicity in the other deaths, but admitted she killed Mak to obtain insurance. He said she held seven policies for at least $6,400 on Mak's life, and paid the premiums on them.

According to McCrea, Mrs. Veras confessed she tried to poison Mak by putting lye in coffee and liquor he drank, and, when he did not "die fast enough," lured him up a ladder, urged him to enter an attic window, then pushed him out.

Mak's death started the investigation that revealed 11 other men had died from poisoned liquor in the home since 1923, according to police.

ALL OF THE DEBUTANTES WHO STILL FEEL THAT they can learn a thing or two are going to college this fall, and are already anticipating their first term or looking forward to resuming friendships of last year.

* * *

BETTY HOBBS

It is nice to hear that Helen Fitch, Mrs. Conover Fitch's daughter, is going to carry on at Vassar. Helen has always been an honor student, having won a scholarship last year, and we hear that a real friend of the family, who also has a talented daughter, is going to "underwrite" Helen. Friendship is such a rare "find" these days, we send her our blessing.

* * *

Betty Hobbs is studying interior decorating. She is the pride and joy of the Conrad Hobbses, and they and Junior have returned from a trip to Nova Scotia and are staying at their apartment on the Riverway.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Eaton, who have taken their college daughter, Dorothea Newman, traveling in Europe, will return this week and will go to their country place in Concord. "Dotty" is not going back to Smith College, which pleases mother.

* * *

Miss Huldah Smith to Attend Vassar

HULDAH SMITH, DAUGHTER OF DR. AND MRS. GEORGE GILBERT SMITH of Union Park, is going to Vassar along with Jean Adams, the Winthrop Adamses' daughter, and Francesca Laighton. The Smiths are one of the pioneers who moved from Beacon Hill to Union Park, in the South End of Boston, in a heroic effort to bring that part of Boston "up" again to its former glory. Several adventurers—among them the Hendricks Whitmans—remodeled an old mansion, and figuratively placing a clothespin on their noses and blinders on their eyes took up residence in The Park with, we suspect, an eye to future real estate values. How the experiment has worked out is not for us to say, but we have not heard of any great covered wagon drive to Coontown.

* * *

IT IS THE GILBERT SMITHS' place at 68 Chestnut that the Wainwright Perkinses—those terribly rich Perkinses—have taken for the winter, and its boasts a large ballroom at the top of the house which will no doubt see some gay parties this winter for the budding daughter, Margaret Smith, the elder daughter of the house of Smith, came out from No. 68. Years before that it was the abode of the Steven Fairbankses.

* * *

BEATRICE (BABSY) CLOUGH of 161 Beacon st., who has done such interesting things with La Cercle Francais, is staying abroad with relatives, and does not know whether she will return this winter or not. Last winter she had a JOB with a down-town brokerage house. The Clough family fortunes were made in the Japan tea business, and Babsy has spent two winters in Tokio.

EVERYONE IS WONDERING when Mrs. Chauncy Nash (Susette —christened Susan—Long) is returning from Williamsburg, Virginia. Susette is one of those girls who always keeps people WONDERING, as all beautiful women should. Two years ago she was president of the Vincent Club, and made a hit with everyone. This summer she and Chauncy rented their house at Cohasset to the Joseph Warrens, and she kept an assignment with Mr. Perry, the architect, to DO Williamsburg, that is, restore it historically. Besides being clever, she is a lovely titian blonde, very distingue, and friend husband has been hanging about looking very forlorn for this lovely lady. They live on Marlborough st. in the winter, and have two small sons, who have been away at camp while mother has been restoring things. Maybe her next assignment will be to restore SOME ONE to a happy state of mind.

HER MOTHER, MRS. HARRY V. LONG, who was a BOWDITCH—and that means a great deal in Boston—has a magnificent place on an island, Whitehead in Cohasset Harbor. She has been visited by her other daughter, Mrs. Helen Long Patterson of West Cedar st., this summer. Mrs. Patterson is a widow and is interested in dogs, not men, being followed constantly by long-limbed Russian wolfhounds, like the sad queen in the fairy tale.

CAN YOU BELIEVE IT, three brides and bridegrooms ran into each other in Paris. Some looked shy, some bored and some didn't look at all. Our own private opinion is they should not have tried to DO Paris with a wife. The Haskett Derbys got there first, then the Elkinses—she was probably one of the bored as it had become a habit before she left—and the Clarkes—we just know Kitty couldn't look blase.

Fur Trims Are in Contrast

By ANN ARDEN

THERE ARE two reasons for trimming a fur coat with another fur. One is for contrast in color. The other is for variety in texture. A long-haired fur gives a smart touch to a flat fur; a tightly curled fur makes a nice change from a very sleek one; and, a plain fur adds chic to a spotted one.

* * *

SOME OF the favorite furs of the season announce strong affinities as to trimming. Flat black furs, caracul and pony, show a liking for silver fox; and, for the first time, silver fox is within reach of most of us. Krimmer, also, in grey, with its kinky curls, makes a smart contrast with pony or caracul.

* * *

THE WHITE and black theme still persists, with black pony coats trimmed in galyak, and black Alaska seal coats trimmed in ermine.

* * *

SEAL, both the Alaskan variety and the dyed muskrat, known as Hudson seal, express a fondness for a contrasting fur. Mink or sable gives an elegant touch, while the mauvish-grey of blue fox against the velvety blackness of the seal, produces a charming effect.

* * *

REVERSING THAT idea, the dashing leopard makes a most effective trimming, and cleverly used, as in the model pictured, forms an alliance ideal for the college girl. The coat is of silver muskrat, on semi-fitted lines, the skins beautifully marked and blended. The slant pockets are edged in leopard, swirling cuffs, set on between waist and elbow, have inserts of the leopard, while the same dramatic fur forms the center portion of the youthful tie scarf.

* * *

THE HAT is of black felt, with white ribbons banding its uneven brim, and white feather posed on right side.

* * *

Only Real Baron in France Is Dead

Montreal, Aug. 30 (AP)—The eighth baron of Longueuil, holder of the only ancient hereditary Canadian title, is dead in Pau, France. He was Reginald Charles Grant D'Iverville de Ste. Helene, 78 years old.

As he had no children, the title goes to his half-brother, John Moore de Bienville Charles Grant, who resides in England.

New York Fails in Bid for Film Capital

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—New York's bid to outstrip Hollywood as the motion picture capital apparently has failed, movie men disclosed today.

A movement which a year ago seemed to presage a wholesale eastward trek of the talkies has almost petered out. The California climate and the Hollywood facilities have offset New York's advantages.

HORSE SHOW TO BE HELD AT DUBLIN, N. H.

Exhibitors to Attend From Boston

September is the month for horse shows and the first will take place next Saturday, at the estate of Franklin McVeagh of Chicago at Dublin, N. H. Although this is one of the smaller shows it is none the less interesting and many Bostonians are taking an active part. Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Gerry, of Providence, R. I., will be the hosts at a buffet supper on Friday evening at Robin Wood for the judges, committee and guests.

Youthful Exhibitors

Included in the group of judges will be Mrs. Fairfield Osborne, M. F. H., for the hunters and jumpers, Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Jr., for saddle horses and horsemanship; and Prof. L. V. Tirrell for the farm bitch. Mrs. Gerry heads the committee for the show and assisting her will be Miss Amelia Peabody, Mrs. Reaoul Russell, Mrs. William Ambrose Taylor, Jr., Mrs. William Yarrow, Mrs. Edward Byron, Miss Elmina Brewster, Miss Agnes Troup, Mr. Clarence G. Peil.

Miss Junia Mason, a debutante of the coming season, will be one of the exhibitors as will Miss Faith Barney, young daughter of the J. Dallinger Barneys, Miss Martha Stribling, Miss Joan Fisher, Miss Nancy Frazer, Miss Phyllis Gerry, Mr. Cardwell Gerry, Mr. Edward J. Byron, Miss Peabody and Mr. Peil and Mrs. Yarrow and Mrs. Russell.

There will be entries from Peterborough, across the way, with Mary Morison and Sidney Williams showing, Miss Miriam Winslow, from Francistown, N. H., and Mr. Harry Hastings and Frank Chase from Keene, N. H.

Several dinners will be given on Saturday night at the Dublin Lake Club and a dance will conclude the program of the day.

Play Is Planned

Mr. Joseph Lindon Smith will put on an original play at the theater on his estate at Loon Point on Monday evening, September 7. The play, written by Mr. Smith, will be in celebration of Watteau's birthday and includes about 25 residents of the vicinity in the cast.

There will be dancing this evening at the North Shore Garden, in Salem, which was the old Salem Golf Club once upon a time. The proceeds of tonight's party will be donated to the M. S. P. C. C. by the owner-manager, Mr. A. S. Brown.

Reunion Move by Anglicans

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—Steps toward the reunion of the Anglican Communion of Churches and the Old Catholic Churches were taken by representatives of both organizations at a meeting in Bonn in July, a report disclosed today.

A joint commission agreed on the following points:

"Each communion recognizes the catholicity and independence of the other and maintains its own.

"Each communion agrees to admit members of the other communion to participate in sacramenta.

"Intercommunion does not require from either communion acceptance of all doctrinal opinion, sacramental devotion or liturgical practice characteristic of the other but implies that each believes the other to hold all the essentials of the Christian faih."

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—Ralph Dawson, Guaranty Trust Co. vice-president, announced today his son, Ralph, Jr., 10, and the small son of Fred Marston of Morristown, N. J., had been found last night in Rutland, Vt., after they ran away yesterday from a boys camp at Lake Drummond, Vt.

The boys left a note at camp saying they were coming to New York.

Smart Gowns on Americans at Deauville

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL
Universal Service Special Cable

Deauville, Aug. 31—When the weather is bad and the outdoor dendezvous are at a disadvantage it is the grill room of the Casino that draws the smart crowd at luncheon time.

There the other day was Mrs. Alfred Parker, of New York, who with her husband is building up an important French racing stable. They were here with Lady Duncan Orr Lewis and Lady Kekiwich. Mrs. Parker wore a simple tailored dress in hunter's green basketweave woolen material. Her very smart hat had a Robin Hood effect, with a green quill on the left side standing up. With the costume she wore a coat of summer ermine.

Brick Red Dress

Lady Orr Lewis was in a brick red dress with white cuffs and collar. She wore a white knitted beret with a band of the same red on the border, and a hem length nutria coat.

Lady Kekiwich was in a coat and skirt of palest pink kasha, with an odd looking felt hat of the cow-boy three-gallon style in marked contrast to the other women with small well fitting hea. gear.

Miss Edna Walker Malcokey, of New York, author, was in a latest Paris creation. At the Salle de Baccarat she wore a white woolen pique dress, with a crepe de chine scarf of pale green and white, and a hem length coat of tete de negre woolen material, belted with a large collar of white ermine. With this went a white stocking beret.

Wears Black Wool

Her sister, Mrs. Julia Mann, of 995 Fifth ave., New York, who is making the European tour, was with her. Mrs. Mann's afternoon dress was of black wool with incrustations of sapphire blue on the skirt, collar scarf of the same blue, and a small black hat with the same blue grosgrain. In the evening Mrs. Mann wore black lace.

Another at the Salle de Baccarat the same evening was Baronne de Villiers du Terrage, the former Ruth King, of New York. She wore fine beige lace with a scarf of the same lace hanging over the shoulders.

The Begum Aga Khan wore a beaded dress of tete de negre with the skirt composed of two flounces of beaded fringe and the corsage lightly beaded, with a cluster of ospreys of the same color on the left shoulder.

Romeo's Mystic Power Lured Mrs. Lemke

plication that the Clarksburg bluebeard had disposed of the body of one of his victims in an excavation near the inn.

"He had nothing but his black bag on both visits," said Borsclough. "I am amazed at the revelations about him. He appeared to be anything but a criminal. He was friendly and joyful and talked freely and easily."

WITHDREW $1553

It was learned today on authority of officials of the bank that Mrs. Lemke drew $1553 from the Mechanics Savings Bank in Worcester on July 28, the day before she started on her fatal wedding journey.

Statements of her brother, Gaston L. Fleming of Northboro, that she had $5000 or $6000 in various banks are being investigated.

She closed out her account in the Mechanics Bank. Her depositor's card there showed she was 49 years old and born in Germany. She gave her address as Northboro.

So marked was the "Bluebeard's" sinister power over Mrs. Lemke that Mrs. James E. Whitin, her socially prominent employer, warned her against accepting the confessed murderer's proposal of a hasty marriage.

VISITED WHITIN HOME

Fellow employes of the divorced Mrs. Lemke met Harry F. Powers when he called on her at the palatial Whitin estate here only two days before she left with him on a supposed trip to his "ranch in Iowa," a trip which led to her death.

Mrs. Lemke earlier had confided in several members of the household that she had corresponded with Powers for months and was seriously considering his offer of marriage at the mythical Iowa ranch.

Among her confidantes was Beatrice Robinson. Mrs. Lemke spoke happily of the prospect before her, Miss Robinson said, and the hope that years of loneliness after the death of her husband were at an end.

On July 27, two days before Mrs. Lemke left Northboro, never to return, Powers came to the Whitin home. Mrs. Lemke introduced him to the members of the household and he chatted with them for more than an hour.

A strange feeling crept over the little group as the rotund Romeo spoke in glowing terms of the blissful life on his extensive "Iowa ranch."

Immaculately garbed and with easy assurance he tried to make a lasting impression on the housemaids and men servants that gathered about him.

He spoke glibly of the wealth that his ranch provided, sorrowfully of the "dear wife who had long since departed this life," and hopefully that his forthcoming marriage to Mrs. Lemke would prove ideal.

Scarcely had Powers departed with Mrs. Lemke for a visit to the home of her sister in Northboro than the housemaids realized he had terrified them.

His eyes, they agreed, held a glint of evil, he betrayed a nervousness far deeper than that expected of a middle-aged bridegroom, his voice had a peculiar, shaking quality when he told them that he "must hurry to start in a day or two for the West."

ANXIOUS TO LEAVE

The maids talked at length, describing their impressions to each other, and finally rushed to their mistress to tell her of their fears.

Impressed by the vague dread they felt, Mrs. Whitin, the next day, asked Mrs. Lemke to bring Powers again to the house so that she might meet him.

"But we are leaving tomorrow morning," Mrs. Lemke replied.

"Then, will you stop here on your way," asked Mrs. Whitin.

"I am sorry," said Mrs. Lemke, "we are going over the Boston Post road. He is in a hurry to get back to his ranch and we must not lose time."

That night the fifth known victim of the Bluebeard of Clarksburg bade adieu to Mrs. Whitin and the staff of servants.

She laughed at their warnings against her hasty action. She told them she trusted the "man from Iowa." She assured them she would write soon after her arrival at the "ranch."

On the following morning, July 29, she drove away with Powers from the home of her sister, Mrs. Gretchen Fleming of Northboro. One month later, August 28, the spades of searchers unearthed her body in the rear of Powers' charnel garage on the outskirts of Clarksburg, W. Va.

And several hours later Powers calmly added her name to the list of four whom he admitted he strangled two weeks before.

VISIT RECALLED

At the Whitin home today Beatrice Robinson told of the day she confessed strangler came there.

"Dorothy had mentioned Powers several times before I met him," she said. "He had been writing to her and often I carried mail fro- him up to her room.

"She told me she liked him and was considering getting married. We all wished her luck, and hoped that he might prove a good man. We all felt rather sorry for her as she had told us that her first husband and her only child had died many years before.

"Only until this awful thing happened did we know that she had been divorced a long time ago. She talked about Powers continually, and then one day told us that he had come East and was staying at Uxbridge for a day or so.

SIGNATURES FOUND

"She told me he wanted her to leave at once with him, that he was in a hurry to get back to business and that they would be married when they reached Iowa.

"She could not make up her mind and finally he left after saying he would be back in a week."

(A Boston Evening American reporter obtained copies of Powers' signatures on the register of the Uxbridge Inn on July 12 and July 21.)

"The next we heard from him," Miss Robinson continued, "was when Dorothy told us he had returned and a few days later he came to the house to meet her.

TALKED FOR HOUR

"He began to talk after Dorothy introduced him and for an hour he told us about his plans and his ranch in Iowa. I remember that some one said they thought his name was Pierson but he passed that off some way or other.

"Some of the girls left the room and were actually afraid to go back. There was something about the man that frightened all of us. He was an excellent talker, very polite and he seemed quite fond of Dorothy, but not one of us felt that she would be safe with him let alone being happy.

"Dorothy was always quiet and sensible but while he was there she seemed to be in a trance. We all had the idea that he had a strange influence over her—that she was hypnotized.

"When they left that day for her sister's house we went to Mrs. Whitin and told her about Powers and she tried to have Dorothy bring him back. But we never saw him again."

All of the Whitin household spoke affectionately of the slain woman. She began work there after nursing Mr. Whitin's mother back to health in her Whitinsville home several years ago.

Mrs. Lempke is said to have had the matrimonial agency habit.

Over a period of three years she conducted an impassioned correspondence with an "A. C. Morris" whom she met through a marriage market advertisement.

Morris wrote most of his letters on stationery of a hotel in Worcester, Mass., to Mrs. Lempke who also lived in that city at the time.

Love Letters Pour in While "Cow Face" Confesses

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 31—A batch of letters from matrimonially inclined and trusting women, addressed to Harry F. Powers, the "cow-faced butcher" of Quiet Dell, were turned over to the police today by postal authorities.

These letters arrived at the post-office here even as Powers was confessing that the trusting love of at least two other women would result in their violent death.

The return addresses on these new letters, 12 in number, show they were from St. Louis, Detroit, Wichita, Kan.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Philadelphia, Burlington, N. C.; Norfolk, Va.; Oceanview, Va.; Clearfield, Pa.; Birmingham, Ala., and Olean, N. Y.

Friendship Society Again in Question

Detroit, Aug. 31 (AP)—Postal inspectors conferred today with Postmaster Kellogg to determine whether operations of the American Friendship Society, through which Harry F. Powers made love to the two women he killed in Clarksburg, W. Va., were within the law.

Dr. Albert B. Plater and his wife, Olga, said by officers to have organized the club, left the city Friday. Dr. Plater is a physician and a manufacturer of cosmetics in addition to his activities in bringing together lonely persons.

Three years ago, it was ruled that that society was within the law, as a correspondence club and not a "matrimonial agency."

YOUTH RESCUED BY BROTHER

Haverhill, Aug. 31—Frank Mulioli, 18, of 381 River st., was rescued from drowning today by his brother in Lake Saltonstall, but two hours later the youth died in Gale Hospital from heart trouble.

Police say Mulioli was sitting on the bank of the pond with another youth, when he suddenly fell into the water. The second youth rushed over to Mulioli's brother, Jake, former high school football star, and the latter dove into the water, bringing His brother to shore.

Ex-Pastor Is Married to Sweetheart of 66 Years Ago

East Hartford, Ct., Aug. 31 (AP)—A retired minister today led to the altar his sweetheart of 66 years ago.

The wedding united the Rev. John Squires of East Hartford and Mrs. Elizabeth R. Page of Brockton, Mass., each 84.

His quest for education separated the then 18-year-old youth from his sweetheart in 1865 when the former left his home at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to study at Oxford, England. Mrs. Page at the time resided at Bridges, a few miles away. They next saw each other a few weeks ago, when Mrs. Page learned of her former sweetheart's residence here.

JAPAN DENIES LID ON FLIERS

Tokio, Aug. 31 (AP)—Officials today denied that messages sent by Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, Jr., were being censored. The denial was prompted by a dispatch from Albany, N. Y., quoting relatives of Herndon as saying they believed cable filed to them from Tokio by the fliers had been subjected to censorship.

Cycle Officer Injured

Motorcycle Officer Clarence Cody of Lynn suffered a fractured leg when his motorcycle skidded on Euclid ave., Lynn, and crashed into an automobile.

OLD MAN HELD IN LOVE KILLING

Ossipee, N. H., Aug. 31—County officials today took measures to prevent any attempt to lynch George F. Fernald, aged blacksmith, a move which was threatened following his alleged murder of James Williams in the yard of a Jackson tearoom.

Fernald was removed from the Conway Hospital where he was treated for a self-inflicted gun shot wound, and taken to the Carroll County jail. He was placed in the jail hospital, suffering from loss of blood, but was not in a serious condition.

Authorities stated that the killing and attempted suicide culminated a series of clashes between Williams and Fernald growing out of Williams' objections to Fernald's unwelcome attentions to the slain man's wife.

and that there should be an international mortgage upon them.

"I mean that the Council of the League of Nations when face to face with a proved war of aggression should be empowered under article 16 of the League covenant to make use of them to settle a war crisis.

"Are other nations, like us, ready? Are they willing to put their permanent air, naval and land forces under the control of and at the disposition of the League of Nations? By this gesture the problem of parity might be solved."

M. Paul-Boncour said limitation of armaments is linked with the idea of creating an international armed force which will insure respect for arbitral decisions and with a policy of imposing penalties on nations which have been declared aggressors. He said French circles yearned for perpetual peace and are growing apprehensive over next year's disarmament conference.

FEARS DRIVE AT FRANCE

"Europe's troubles," he continued, "the campaign for the revision of treaties, the hypocrisy with which France's military strength is weighed with a total ignoring of France's responsibilities, and an evident jealousy of France's sacrifices—all are engendering the impression here that there is a deliberate wish to ruin France's national security."

THE LOVES OF CHARLIE CHAPLIN

King of Laughs and World's Unluckiest Lover

(Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American)

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Charlie's European trip brought him great relaxation from work and film demands, but it brought him in contact with many beautiful women. Wherever he went, there was always, some young feminine person to engage him.

CHAPTER 23

Charlie is like this, you know.

Let him find an attractive young woman, and he suddenly becomes totally oblivious to the remaining members of his party.

Charlie arrived in London, accorded a welcome seldom given kings and queens. The "great Charlie" had come home for a bit, and the lowly as well as the wealthy paid him homage.

London society did itself proud in welcoming the native son, born of lowly parents who brought him up in comments and tramps. But Charlie's early life was dimmed with age.

Only the inimitable funmaker and film producer was considered at this time.

At one party given him by British society Charlie, as usual, met his feminine Waterloo. She was a smart young thing and as "up" in the world of snobbishness and broad a's as any one could be.

Gallant as he is, Charlie asked her if she tangoed.

HAD EVERY DANCE

And, much to the amusement of the party, Charlie danced every dance with her. No other woman had a look-in on his affections.

He forgot all about the rest of the guests and confided himself only with the young English woman.

In telling of the incident, Charlie's personal representative deemed it wise not to mention her name.

But suffice to say, she is a member of a noted British family and one of the top-notchers of British society.

"You know, we thought Charlie was falling for her," his friend told me. "Charlie is great on the tango and maybe she couldn't. Consequently, they got off to a great start on being friendly. As a matter of fact, I heard several comments on a possible romance between them."

But suddenly Charlie departed London and arrived in Berlin, where, true to form, another tango partner appeared on the horizon.

This time, the film king engaged the attentions and admiration of no less a theatrical person than Lajana, the rage of Berlin. She is a marvelous dancer and has scored triumph after triumph at the Rinehart theater.

She is still appearing there.

And so, they, too, tangoed.

Of course, they talked in between, but Charlie's greatest interest is dancing. It has been advanced that Charlie is sticking to dancing to keep his feet on the ground all the time he is with a woman. It is only a thought, however.

Lajana, whiled away pleasant hours for Chaplin until he took leave of the German capital.

From there he went to Vienna, but nobody in particular attracted his fancy. Nor at Venice.

AT PARIS—YES

But when Charlie got back into Paris—oh, me, oh my!

A blue-eyed Danish girl, Eeda Ensen, seemed to take his heart by storm.

She had been sent by an agent to interest Charlie in engaging her for his films. And from what was told me, Charlie gave her more than just consideration.

His friends told me he gave her "considerable consideration."

The blonde tresses and the intriguing blue eyes almost made the film king forget that she came for business.

Eeda wanted to take the screen test. So Charlie sent her to the Joinville studio of Paramount, where the photographers found her to be an excellent photo subject.

Charlie realized the girl spoke broken English, but with such hair and those eyes—

Well, Charlie was willing to compromise the situation. He would get round that somehow.

The girl, too, could speak no other language save her native tongue, so Charlie encountered another problem. He couldn't use her for his foreign films.

But she was such a pretty young thing and she did have such hair and eyes. Charlie couldn't forget that. And so he continued to admire the young woman and continued to dance with her and obviously revealed his extreme fascination for her.

And the girl kindly accepted his generous attentions, his pleasantries, his ardent courtship.

"You are charm-eeng man, Charlie!" she told him.

Another thing that got him. He liked her voice. He liked her broken English. It amused him.

The two were getting on splendidly. Charlie complimented the agent who sent the young woman to him. He lauded him for recognizing beauty and talent.

The agent said nothing and listened.

A REAL SURPRISE

Charlie continued to take the girl places in Paris where there are so many places to go.

And then one day, Charlie was gently informed that the agent who had sent Eeda Ensen to him was Eeda's husband.

Charlie didn't take it on the chin. It almost knocked him for a goal. He could hardly believe that Eeda was married or that the agent was her husband.

And then, too, he was a jealous husband. He would be.

Charlie ended that romance pronto. He was out from that moment on to both Eeda and her agent-husband.

Momentarily, Charlie was dumfounded.

But those episodes pass on like little ships that pass in the night. Charlie left Paris and went to Nice, or to the Riviera.

With members of his party, he made the trip and not until he reached Nice was he at all comfortable.

But soon he arrived at the world's playground. His stay at Nice was to be the crowning enjoyment of the trip.

But soon, a dark-haired and dark-eyed maiden was to take possession of his affections a little maiden, whose romance is still being talked about in Hollywood and whom Hollywood awaits anxiously.

(Charlie's romance with May Reeves will be told in tomorrow's American.)

Richard Barthelmess to Be Starred in "Love Is a Racket"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor.

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, Aug. 31—The last time I had a talk with Richard Barthelmess he told me that since he wasn't going abroad he was willing to make an extra picture. Well, you can guess First National snapped at that, for isn't Dick one of their best male stars?

Louella O. Parsons

Darryl Zanuck believes he has just the ideal vehicle for Dick, and it's all set providing Dick okays the story. It's called "Love Is a Racket," a novel by Byron Ryan. So sure is Darryl that the story is what First National has been looking for he bought it from the galley proofs. It won't be out until late fall.

All of Hollywood has been greatly interested in the Zanuck baby. In self-defense Virginia and Darryl just had to name her so they are calling her Darrilyn after her dad. One thing, she can be sure nobody else has the same name.

Private Concert

Imagine having a private concert with Jimmy Durante singing "He Ups to Me and I Ups to Him." That's what happened when I visited the Lawrence Tibbett set. Louise Fazenda and Ernest Torrence assisted by beating time—and, well, all of us did a step. I was surprised to see Louise on the Tibbett set. She plays Jimmy's wife. They ought to be a riot. Jimmy is also everyone's favorite and Louise knows a few things about comedy herself. Jimmy says his great trouble is changing his time schedule. For 18 years he says he stayed up all night, entertaining at night clubs, and now when he gets ready to think of sleep it's time to get up.

This is an auspicious time for novelties. Elmer Clifton, who directed "Down to the Sea in Ships," is doing a series of shorts on ghost towns. "There is something eerie and weird about a town that at one time was pulsating with life and is now abandoned. A very pretty romance could be built around such a series. Another series of unique shorts are the ones to be made by Leonard Fields, writer and director for Harry Garson, productions, in multicolor, released by RKO-Pathe. Mr. Fields writes to some of his friends to say he has lined up his first short story. It will be a Chinese version of the "Volga Boatman," photographed on a canal that extends almost a thousand miles into the interior of China. Mr. Fields is using Shanghai as his headquarters and he will go to Indo-China, the Dutch East Indies, Java, Sumatra and other fascinating places for his locations.

Seen and Heard

The romance of Milton Golden, young lawyer and assemblyman, and Mary Philbin, seems to be flourishing. Milton has been seen again and again with different girls but Mary is now the favorite. Wonder when she is coming back to make a picture? Russell Gleason and Mary Brian are seen everywhere together these days. What has happened to Jack Oakie? Mary used to be his favorite actress. Joan Peers is young enough and good-looking enough, I suppose, to risk playing in a picture without makeup. She has been signed for a part in "Over the Hill" at Fox and she has decided to see if she can do without powder, rouge and lipstick as some of the men do.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: LADY INVERCLYDE in a pink sport suit and hat lunching with LOTHAR MENDEZ at the Embassy. Their wedding is rumored for October. DOROTHY HALL entertaining with a farewell luncheon at the Embassy. MARION MARX saying au revoir at the luncheon. She and Zeppo flew to New York Saturday morning. JACK OAKIE getting a midnight snack at Henry's and being pointed out by several admiring tourists. MARY BRIAN and RUSSELL GLEASON Hollywood's latest turtle doves at the Derby. ERNEST TORRENCE playing the piano on the Tibbett set. TIBBETT urging JIMMY DURANTE to sing for him. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Waldron's Opening

Waldron's Casino has stepped off into a new season. The inaugural bill includes Jessie McDonald and her "High Rollers," a burlesque offering. On the same bill are several acts of vaudeville and two feature talking pictures.

Bessie Love Scores in Strong Headline Act at Boston

Through the years, Miss Bessie Love has been one of the most constant stars of the cinema.

And now, this week, she comes to the stage of the Keith-Boston with all these cinematic triumphs behind her. As ever, she is an appealing sort of little person, as ever she is a good actress, keenly conscious of an audience that asks no more than to be amused for a few moments.

* * *

She appears this time with Ted Snyder, the song writer. She has a good act and a clever one. At times she sings old songs, at times she tries some new ones. She gives vent to her art of mimicry in a dialogue piece, she poses and postures in a short caricature of a weary darkskin dancer up Harlem way. Whatever she does, she does well.

Also on the Boston stage is another clever person, Mel Klee, blackface artist, with his swift drawled monologue, his tilted cigar and his bag of cheerful songs.

* * *

The film feature of the week is "The Woman Between," fast-moving Franco-American drama, with Lily Damita, alluring as ever, as the star, and with that sterling actor, O. P. Heggie, also in the cast.

Among the other featured players are Lester Vail and Anita Louise, and the plot tells a tempestuous tale of society doings on both sides of the big pond.

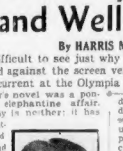
"An American Tragedy" Is Brilliantly Directed and Well Acted

By HARRIS MORGAN

It is difficult to see just why Theodore Dreiser so stridently protested against the screen version of "An American Tragedy," now current at the Olympia and the Uptown.

Mr. Dreiser's novel was a ponderous and elephantine affair. The photoplay is neither; it has been brilliantly directed, well acted and cleverly fitted with dialogue. It follows the novel as faithfully as it may, rejecting such of the material, but retaining all that is necessary or pertinent. That able artist of the cinema, Josef Von Sternberg, is the director to whom all praise is due. His assistant, as far as dialogue goes, is that almost diabolically clever wit, Samuel Hoffenstein. Together, they have dredged all gloominess from the Dreiser story, and, set it forth as one of the best murder trial motion pictures ever made.



Phillips Holmes

Where Dreiser plotted through pages, they have cut and clipped their scenes, cut their speeches down to the necessary minimum, shown shifts of emotion, sidelights of character in a few sharp seconds. Mr. Dreiser had two long volumes to build up and illumine the personality of Clyde Griffiths, that weak, neurotic, yet somehow rather appealing young man. Von Sternberg, with only a few reels of film, does the same thing with consummate craft, with consummate artistry.

* * *

It must have been no easy task to cut down two of Mr. Dreiser's heavy volumes to fit a few moments of flickering film, yet Von Sternberg and Hoffenstein have done this and more. They are dealing with cheap people, with sensational and almost vulgar situations, yet their whole photoplay is free from any taint of cheapness.

Their sharp caught scene of the murder on the lake, the overturned boat, the whitely floating straw hat is merely one isolated example of what they have been able to accomplish by mere shiftings of light and shadow.

They have, miraculously, shifted out the essentially dramatic situations and set them forth for what they are worth; pointed them up, barbed them with satire and sardonic sidelights of American justice. And if the film seems far better than the book, the reason is not hard to seek. Von Sternberg is an artist at his trade.

'Bought' Tops Fenway Bill

One more Constance Bennett comes to the local screen in a role which runs the whole gamut of emotions. This time it is "Bought" and may be seen at the Fenway. The heroine is a strutting little backdaw of a girl who resents poverty and decides to climb into high society. She almost gains her goal, but at considerable expense of character. Featured with Miss Bennett are Ben Lyon and her own father, Richard Bennett, who is her partner in the story as well as in fact.

New Scollay Film

"Transatlantic" is the film feature at the Scollay this week. Among the players are Edmund Lowe, Greta Nissen, Jean Hersholt, Myrna Loy, Lois Moran

HIGH COURT GLANDS HOPE FOR JUSTICE

—By Gilbert Seldes—

I HAVE MISLAID THE ISSUE of Contempo in which Dr. William J. Robinson analyzed the Supreme Court of the United States in a manner which has the charm of novelty, if nothing else. I cannot, therefore, quote the exact words; the theme has been stated before and is rapidly becoming popular. Roughly it is this: There are four conservatives on the bench and four liberals, and one who shifts between the two. If, then, the glands of this judge work in a certain way on a certain morning, we have reactionary decision; if they work in another way, we have a decision pleasing to liberals.

GILBERT SELDES

Glands have been the new saviors of humanity for 10 years, at least; made popular by the newspaper monkeyshines of the Voronoffites and made important by the scientists who have discovered that growth and decay, health and sickness, are regulated and influenced by those obscure little bodies which were simply a nuisance to physiologists 50 years ago. Giants and morons owe their peculiarities to glands, ductless or otherwise; they regulate personality; they are more important than complexes.

• • •

Three Damnations

I will not quarrel with the glands. All I dislike is the mania for saddling humanity with a new tyrant. No sooner does humanity shake off one damnation, than a new one is found, usually less dignified. When John Calvin and Jonathan Edwards said that we were damned, they damned us for the greater glory of God; they said we could not be free, because our freedom would take something away from God's perfection. It may have been cruel, but it had grandeur; it brought it into some association with the divine power. Now we are damned because our glands are lazy and are brought into association with a brown powder and the new medicine man.

We have had damnation by religion, then damnation by economics, and now we can enjoy damnation by science. Oddly enough, each has been offered as a new way to freedom, a new salvation. Christianity broke down the power of the angry personal gods, Marxism undermined the tyranny of the angry personal manufacturers, and science lays about it freely against all other claimants of the soul of man. Yet in the end we are slaves to pre-natal influences, to the complexes and inhibitions of our early youth, to the frailities of our flesh. We cannot go into battle without consulting a specialist on the pituitary body.

A Fourth Offered

To hell with them all, if you like. If doctors can take adolescent gangsters and make them into good citizens, we shall all be pleased as Punch; but we shall go on living as if we were independent of their glands and their powders. If psychoanalysis can make a good poet out of a bad one, that will be one bad poet the less, and a great gain; but individually we shall assume that our complexes aren't significant. And we shall always remember what happened to the phrenologists with their bumps of Amativeness and Caution and Benevolence, and the like. They were as certain as the scientists of today that they had discovered the truth about human actions, the secret springs; and they were totally wrong.

The motto of psychologists and some biologists seems to be: Anything but the mind! A kink in the nervous system is good; a defective gland is fine; but the mind doesn't exist. And it must be a great relief to the eminent ninth juror on the Supreme Court bench to learn he is not responsible for his decisions and his glands are. All his learning in the law, all his uprightness as a human being, all his loyalty as an honored citizen count for nothing against the unpredictable functioning of a gland. I wonder whether Messrs. Holmes and Brandeis appreciate the compliment.

Shaw, the Musician

Bernard Shaw celebrates his 75th birthday with the promise of a book on Russia, a sequel to his recent Moscow visit in the company of Lady Astor.

In his early days Shaw was musical critic on the "Star," which has greater literary traditions than any other London evening newspaper. Sotheby's catalogue, I see, contains the following item:

718 Shaw (G. Bernard). A. L. s. 3½ pp., 8vo., 31 March, 1884, to Mrs. Radford:

He sends her a setting of one of her songs for a tenor voice. "It goes high enough to keep most amateur tenors at a distance, but the song would not be bright enough in a lower key . . . The music is trumpery enough, but I am not a composer, and only prefer to be tremendous in the volume of a novel." He goes on to discuss songs and musical settings. If she does not like the setting, he will try again.

Auto. MS. Music, signed "G. B. S." 3½ pp. folio, March, 1884, to the song "How She Comes" with words and music, complete (2).

It will be news to most people that George Bernard Shaw was at one time a composer.

Nocturne

An old house, moon-bleached, 'mid its grassy court,
Looms like a monstrous ghost against the night;
A crane, its elbow crooked to far, dim height,
Leans like a giant joining in some sport.
The cannon start upon the nearby fort;
Three chimneys, like long pointed fingers rise,
Seeming almost to touch the star-strewn skies,
Where fiercely glows their greenish gold transport.
From post and arch, from bridge and winding turn,
Topas and garnet, emerald and blue.
Lamps like barbaric jewels gleam and burn.
Tinging dull ways with magic weird and new,
While faint as fairy flutes that trill and fall
Blasts from remote ship sirens leering call.

—Charlotte Becker.

"Hey, keep your finger outa that hash!"

Census Dull

—By Idwal Jones—

THE CENSUS IS DULL again. It tells us Manhattan has a million and a quarter citizens of "foreign white stock," brackets them under a score of nationalities, and lets it go at that.

Not very instructive data. How much brighter the report would be if an anthropologist had been in charge of the job instead of a mere statistician.

But the suggestion, I suppose, would be thought impious. Sen. Borah wouldn't stand for it. To have your skull forcibly measured by the census man's calipers would be held a violation of human dignity and the Constitution. I should hate that, myself. A pity, for science would otherwise be greatly enriched. As it is, non-scientists will soon be writing more tedious balderdash about the melting pot.

• • •

"How many races are there in Manhattan?" I asked my pet anthropologist.

"I should say about 300," he said. "But no Papuans."

"What? No Papuans?"

"No Papuans," he said bitterly. He is very sensitive on this point.

In his uptown hotel apartment he has a superb collection of 5000 photographs of all races.

It cost him ten years' labor to accumulate and classify them. He snapped them all in cruises within the five boroughs.

On a warm night, when citizens pour out hatless to inhale tepid air on the sidewalks, he embarks on an expedition. He installs his camera-gun in the car and scouts in search of quarry. He peers out like an artilleryman in one of those green payroll tanks and looks for a face of anthropological value.

• • •

Early last July he shot a fine bearded Kazar, from the Caucasus who was selling orange juice on Orchard st. Twice on Third ave., near 14th st., he has bagged a Yakut; both times before a Russian eating house. He snapped a full-grown Albanian, pure strain, with whiskers, in St. Mark's pl.

One being, with a face like a muffin, he shot within a block of his hotel. He puzzled over the photograph for a month, but with the aid of Dr. Ales Hrdlicka's diagrams classified it as a Lapland Eskimo.

Harlem he found rich, but confusing, for it has no less than 42 negroid strains.

Last Christmas, when he was making gifts to all the help in his hotel, he asked the manager where Tom, the colored elevator boy, was. Tom had been there for five years, and he just couldn't overlook Tom.

"Oh, didn't you know?" said the manager. "Tom went home last week—back to Papua."

Song of New Love

You may break my heart.
Well, what then?
The thing was broken yesterday
By other gentlemen!

Your love is gay and warm,
My heart felt cold—
So give me all of love
My hands can hold.

I want it for a cloak,
I need it for a fire!
Give me all of love
I can desire.

When you go forever
And I shut the door,
I can cry no words for you
Than I cried before——

Hearts are queer things!
Wait a while and see
If my heart will break—
Or yours, maybe!

—Margaret Widdemer.

Pope's Barber

—By Bruno Lessing—

FRANKFORT—An old French story came back to me today. About 500 years ago a Parisian barber, chock full of religious fervor, walked all the way to Rome and back. The journey took several months and he endured many hardships. But one doesn't mind physical hardships when one's soul is in torment. When he got back his friends asked him what had impressed him most in Rome.

"I saw the Pope," he said. "And I want to say right here that whoever trims his hair is a rotten barber."

• • •

I was sitting in a cafe here in Frankfort, all alone. And an American from Cleveland who was sitting at the next table spotted me. We began to chat and he asked me what I thought of the old Rath-Haus. I told him I hadn't seen it and therefore didn't have any thoughts on the subject. He looked at me suspiciously. Then he said:

"Why, man, that's what all Americans come here to see."

That was rather a hot one. Being an American and not having come to Frankfort to see the Rath-Haus, I didn't know just how to carry on the conversation—particularly as he was drinking lemonade. Maybe he was right. An American traveling through Europe has enough to keep him occupied without getting into an argument with other Americans. So I ducked.

• • •

INDIVIDUAL experience is, of course, incomplete. It is confined to what you go through and see others going through. You cannot go through the experiences of others and you cannot see what they see.

I have seen Americans in Europe going through the following experiences:

Rushing through picture galleries and looking at historical buildings in every city they visit with a guide book in their hand.

Motoring through half a dozen countries and not seeing a darned thing.

Sitting in a bar or cafe day after day and discussing prohibition until they had to catch steamer back to the United States.

Settling down in one place and making a minute study of their surroundings. There are so many interesting places in Europe that if you undertook to make a minute study of them all it would take about 2000 years.

And this is what most of them do—just live in their hotel and go out with friends and eat and drink and dance and see shows, just as they always do at home.

Well, it's o. k. with me. When I go to a new town I have neither plans nor a set program. Sometimes I wander aimlessly through streets and see what I see—or what I think I see. But, as a rule, I like to sit down in a public place where the natives congregate—don't care whether it's a cafe, a park or a beer garden—and wait for something to turn up.

• • •

I like to see the natives eat, drink and make merry. I love to listen to the music they prefer—above all, I love to hear them sing themselves. One of the biggest kicks I ever got was to hear about 2000 Germans in the Lowenbrau hall in Munich burst into a popular song. And you always find someone to talk to.

If this doesn't work or doesn't hit the right mood, I like to look up a local newspaper man, tell him I'm a newspaper man, too, and ask him to show me the town. Among the things that newspaper men do not show one another are cathedrals, picture galleries, museums and historical buildings. But after you've had a reporter or an editor for a guide you come away with the feeling that you've absorbed the spirit of his city.

• • •

Every town has a soul or a spirit of its own. So, of course, has every American. What I'm wondering about is how often the visitor's mood gets in close touch with the mood of his surroundings.

The mood of the individual changes readily. The mood of a big town is more stable. Sometimes I love to look up an old cathedral and feast my eyes on stained glass windows. But I once went to Rome and bummed around with a nice Italian family, attended a wedding and watched them dance the tarantella, and did not even see St. Peter's.

Anyway, I'm not going to look at the old Rath-Haus here.

Eccentric

There was a man in our town
Who labored day and night
And in the end he gained renown
For what he didn't write.

Though much he penned of little note,
His name will live in history—
In all his life he never wrote
A single murder mystery.

MACARONI TAKES PLACE OF POTATOES IN NEW DISHES

Baked macaroni ring with creamed chicken or lamb is an attractive way to use Sunday's leftovers. It is easy to make and will prove a favorite dish with your guests as well as with the members of the family.

FROM MARTHA LEE'S MONDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WAAB

For years I believed that if I ate enough fish I would have a brain equal, in size at least, to Daniel Webster, until a scientist pricked the balloon with the statement that one would have to consume a swordfish or two before there'd be any real effect on brain growth.

Martha Lee

It's a fact, of course, that phosphorus must be constantly supplied to the brain cells, as aid to vigorous and alert mentality—but it is even more important to the body in furnishing an element most necessary for the structure of our bones and maintaining the neutrality of our blood.

PERFECT SUBSTITUTE

As a change from potatoes macaroni is a perfect substitute. Try it with thinly sliced cold meat and a fruit salad for an easy Sunday supper, with frankforts or fricaded dried beef, for lunch. Or heat it in a casserole with diced leftover meat, gravy, minced onion and buttered crumbs. Macaroni and calves' liver with rich brown gravy is not to be sniffed at.

The Lee family are fond of macaroni rings, with the center filled with creamed mushrooms or crab and tuna fish, diced leftover meats in a cream sauce with a little minced green pepper or pimiento. Here's how to make it.

MACARONI RING

1 pkg. macaroni
5 eggs
2 tbsps. butter
6 tbsps. cream
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
Pimientos for garnish

Parboil the macaroni for 5 minutes in 4 quarts rapidly boiling water to which 1 tbsp. salt has been added. Drain. Beat the egg yolks well, add the macaroni, the melted butter, cream, salt and pepper. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in a well-greased ring mold, set in a pan of hot water, for 30 minutes. Turn out on a hot platter. Creamed mushrooms, fish, diced chicken or meat may be used to fill the center of the ring. Garnish with slices of pimiento.

MACARONI WITH TUNA FISH

1 pkg. macaroni elbows
1 (3 oz.) can tuna fish
2 tbsps. olive oil or butter
1 tbsp. minced parsley
5 tomatoes or 1½ cups canned tomatoes
2 tsps. sugar
2 asps. lemon juice
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper

Boil the macaroni elbows for 9 to 12 minutes in 4 quarts rapidly boiling water to which 1 tbsp. salt has been added. Drain. Into a frying pan containing the hot olive oil place the flaked tuna fish. Fry until brown. Add the parsley, tomatoes, sugar, salt and pepper and cook slowly for 20 minutes. Add the macaroni and lemon juice. Combine well and serve. Any other cooked or canned fish may be substituted.

MACARONI WITH CALVES' LIVER

1 pkg. macaroni
2 tbsps. butter
1 onion, chopped
½ lb. calves' liver
2 tbsps. flour
1 can consomme
1 cup tomatoes
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper

Boil the macaroni 9 to 12 minutes in 4 quarts rapidly boiling water to which 1 tbsp. salt has been added. Drain. Melt the butter and in it cook the onion for 5 minutes, then remove. Scald the liver 5 minutes in boiling water and cook slowly in the butter for 20 minutes. Make a paste of the flour and a little cold water. Add, with the salt and pepper, to the consomme and tomatoes. Cook 15 minutes. Combine with the macaroni and cook 2 minutes longer. Garnish with the liver and onions. Four chicken livers may be substituted for the calves' liver or 1 cup of chopped ham. Or the meat may be omitted.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

$1000 in Prizes for Recipes

Of course you are going to compete for the $1000 in Cash Prizes offered for the best original recipes using Fancy Japanese Crab Meat? Simply choose your favorite crab meat recipe that you've adapted to your family's taste and send it with the label from a can of Japanese crab meat, to the Japan Canned Crab Packers and Exporters Association, Room 2000, Graybar Bldg., New York city. You can send as many recipes as you wish, providing there's a Japanese crab meat label with each one.

The first prize will be $500 in gold, the second prize $200 in gold, the third prize $100; then there will be ten prizes of ten dollars each and 20 prizes of five dollars each.

For judges, there'll be Katherine Fisher of Good Housekeeping Institute, Greta Palmer, (N. Y. World Telegram), Esther E. Kimmel, (N. Y. Herald-Tribune Institute) and your old friends Marjorie Mills and Martha Lee. All recipes must be sent in not later than Sept. 15 (remember you are going to mail them to the Japan Canned Crab Packers Assoc., Room 2000, Graybar Bldg., N. Y. city, and not to Martha Lee). The winners will be announced in October.

Now don't let the fact that you haven't been successful in other recipe contests prevent your investing a little time, stationery and stamps in this new, worthwhile contest.

Write only on one side of the paper and be sure you have the address right—Japan Canned Crab Packers Association, Room 2000, Graybar Bldg., New York City.

TEN BILLION IF NEEDED, SAYS UNTERMEYER

New York, Aug. 30 (US)—Terming President Hoover's commission plan for unemployment relief "pathetically" inadequate, Samuel Untermyer today declared for a government prosperity loan of five or even ten billions of dollars.

In a talk for a sound film that is to be shown in theaters throughout the nation, the noted lawyer praised William Randolph Hearst as "a far-sighted patriot and statesman" for suggesting such a huge fund to aid the jobless and needy.

Untermyer said:

"In the name of all that is honest and decent, in the name of humanity and the brotherhood of man, I urge my fellowmen to silence this idle babble, clatter and false prophecy about the oncoming march of prosperity, that is always 'just around the corner,' but never turns that corner whilst the dread specter of hunger and starvation is stalking in our mids..

PATHETIC SPECTACLE

"There is something pathetic and yet ludicrous in the spectacle of a President who has such a hopeless lack of vision as to call to Washington leading men of the country to organize a committee to raise a petty fund of $8,000,000 by private subscription to relieve the distress.

"What an idiotic gesture! If there were only five million unemployed and only one-half of them will require help, it will mean ten million human beings in distress It is about as effective as would be a single drop of water to a regiment of men dying of thirst

"Once again, as when Mr. Hearst vainly tried to keep us out of that accursed war, has he proven himself one of the wisest and most farsighted patriots and saetsmen of our time.

"He combines the vision and resourcefulness that are so sadly lacking in our public men.

10 BILLION IF NEEDED

"There is just one thing and only one, to do in such a crisis, and to do instantly. Call Congress into special session, conscript as much of the surplus income from the men of wealth of the country as is needed.

"If five billions will not do issue 10 billion dollars of bonds and increase the tax on all incomes over $50,000 sufficiently to pay the interest and an annual cumulative sinking fund of one per cent on the issue."

MORE WORKERS BACK ON JOBS

Public works programs and other outdoor projects brought improvement in the employment situation in several sections of the state in July, according to a survey report the U. S. Department of Labor issued today.

Increased activity with more workers back on jobs was noted in worsted and woolen mills, shoe factories and leather establishments. Slight gains were noted also in some furniture, electrical apparatus and textile machinery plants.

Improvements were reported in the fishing and shipbuilding industries.

A number of plants were closed part of the month for vacations, stocktaking and repairs and overhauling of equipment, the report states.

24th Requiem for Archbishop Williams

A large congregation attended the 24th annu l solemn pontifical requiem mass for the repose of the soul of Archbishop John J. Williams, at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross today. Cardinal O'Connell pontificated.

The Rev. William A. Dacey was the assistant priest, Rev. Thomas R. Reynolds, director of the Catholic Charitable Bureau, the deacon, and Rev. William B. Foley the subdeacon. Rev. Harry M. O'Connor and Rev. John R. Wall were masters of ceremonies. Rev. Richard J. Cushing, diocesan director of the Society of the Propagation of the Faith, and Rev. Richard J. Quinlan, diocesan supervisor of parochial schools, were deacons of honor.

Half Billion Needed for German Jobless

Frankfurt-On-Main, Germany, Aug. 31 (AP)—Half a billion dollars will be needed to tide Germany's unemployed over the winter, Adam Stegerwald, minister of labor, today told the Socialist-Trade Union's conference here.

The conference, which represents five million workmen, will co-operate with the government in a campaign to help jobless men.

MELLON SEEKS TAX BOOST

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—Announcement by Secretary Mellon of a billion dollar financing program for the September quarter brought President Hoover today face to face with the vexing problem of how to balance next year's budget.

Mr. Mellon, despite resort at this time to another huge bond issue is known to favor revision of taxes to raise the necessary funds to meet a prospective billion dollar deficit next year. The fiscal year ending June 30 incurred a $903,000,000 deficit, largely met by a long term bond issue.

In the first two months of this fiscal year the Treasury shows a deficit of $387,000,000. Income taxes have yielded $11,000,000 less than in this period a year ago. A drop of $13,000,000 in miscellaneous tax receipts has added to the administration's worries.

Rail Police Head Dies

Los Angeles, Aug. 31 (US)—H. C. Clifford, 84, retired head of the Pennsylvania railroad police, is dead here. He was a Civil War veteran.

DEAD RESTORED BY NEW DRUG

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP)—The story of a man who stopped breathing, apparently dead, and then was restored to partial health in three days by cortin, one of the new hormone extracts, became known today the opening meeting of the American Chemical Society.

Cortin is a secretion of the covering of the small adrenal glands, near the kidneys. It was isolated i the Departmen tof Physiology of the University of Buffalo, by Dr. F. A. Hartman.

The man who stopped breathing had Addison's disease. A hospital interne finding him apparently lifeless, and without even a detectable pulse, hastily gave salts and adrenalin.

This treatment restored signs of life, and a hurry call brought Cortin 40 minutes later. With its arrival restoration began.

20 Fighters Polite to Six Bulls at Mild California Game

San Pablo, Calif., Aug. 31 (AP)—Six bulls and 20 toreadors, picadors and matadors met in the Plaza Del Toro here yesterday, and the final result was: six bulls and 23 bullfighters all out of breath.

It was a Portuguese style bull fight. The fighters were not permitted to use banderillas or other weapons, but the bulls were allowed to use their horns. The toreadors registered no hits, but made several runs. The bulls were credited with an errorless afternoon. When it was all over not a bull was even technically dead.

France Ousts U. S. Girls From Palace

Paris, Aug. 31 (INS)—Sixty American girl students may be turned out of their palatial home—the historic palace of Fontainebleau. The French government has decreed that they are "unsuited to the majesty of the edifice."

If they do not vacate the dormitory, the government threatens to close down the entire American conservatory.

MRS. HOOVER'S RELIEF IDEAS

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover does not grant interviews, but her idea on the unemployment emergency — war-time ways for peace-time needs—was voiced in the Clubwoman issued today through Mrs. John F. Sippel, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Sippel pictured Mrs. Hoover's ideas on relief as follows:

"An American more keenly alert to the needs of the people in our communities."

"Organized social Groups marshaling forces to meet emergencies which may arise during the coming months in an effort to prevent want from lack of employment or from other causes, just as we met emergencies in the years of the war."

"Those in distress relieved by whichever group—visiting nurses, playground association, family service societies, parent teachers' associations, etc.—is there to help them."

"Great organizations taking on, not only responsibility for the coming season of distress, but responsibility for relieving suffering year after year."

VETS WILL FIGHT FOR RELIEF

Kansas City, Apr. 31 (AP)—Paul Wolman, commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, called upon the nation's lawmakers today to support legislation designed to aid ex-service men and their families.

Wolman, a Baltimore lawyer, spoke at the formal opening of business sessions of the 32nd national encampment of the organization here.

"We are in no way connected with any political party, and, as an organization of veterans, we propose to stand behind any lawmaker who helps to better the condition of the veteran," he said.

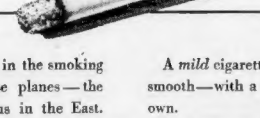
"Dear Peggy

I'm almost too excited to write, and there's so much to see, both inside the plane and out. We've left Washington behind now, and I've just had a Chesterfield in the smoking compartment—they serve them on every ship.

"Among the eighteen passengers there's a senator and a foreign diplomat, and I'm surprised at the number of women. The trip is two hundred miles and the meter in the cabin reads two miles a minute, think of that.

"For me, the Chesterfields were the nicest touch of all. I was just dying for a smoke, and when the hostess passed them (and my favorite cigarette at that) everyone else seemed as tickled as I was. And my—they did taste good!"



Chesterfields are served in the smoking compartments of all these planes—the largest and most luxurious in the East. With the fast growth of air travel, Chesterfield makes many new friends each day, here as in city streets and country homes—wherever good taste counts.

A mild cigarette—delightfully mild and smooth—with a tobacco fragrance all its own.

THIS IS LIFE

DREISER STORY HERE TO SHOW JUST WHAT HE DID NOT WANT

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

PERHAPS NO PICTURE in recent years has been awaited so eagerly, or has raised such expectations, as "An American Tragedy," made from Theodore Dreiser's novel of the same title.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Its publicity has been astonishing, and most of it what one might call "legitimate." First of all, of course, the book was a smash hit. Although it was in two volumes and cost $5, and from every point of view was a long, slow, heavy, pedestrian, and at times intolerable piece of work, it was read enormously.

A popular magazine — Liberty, I think it was—several years ago held a kind of questionnaire of all its employes, from big guns down to the shipping clerks and office boys, to discover what books had most influenced them. The report was printed in three issues—incidentally an interesting proof of the army of people it takes to get out a modern weekly—and, if I remember rightly, Dreiser's ponderous epic led all the rest among the younger readers, particularly among the younger women.

The older readers, by the way, showed themselves to be rank sentimentalists in their choice of reading, compared to the youngsters. Undoubtedly the book was read by all kinds of people who, perhaps, had never before tackled such a solid and serious piece of fiction.

* * *

Boston Ban Unexplained

Then came the "banning" in Boston, which focussed attention upon it all over the country and gave Boston a terrible black eye among literate and educated people. The banning remains inexplicable to this day. If ever a book is likely to be taken by the average reader as a grim sermon on "the wages of sin is death," it is "An American Tragedy." I remember at a legislative hearing on the so-called "bad books" bill two years ago, a prominent State st. lawyer came up unasked to register his opinion that, if he could have his way, he would require every adolescent boy in the United States to read the book.

Then came the play made from the book, which was no great shakes, and then the rumors that Will Hays would never allow the book to be filmed. And then the infrequent reports of progress on the picture—and finally Mr. Dreiser's law suit or injunction because, he said, the film company concerned had ruined the picture, had traduced and betrayed his novel in its presentation.

All in all, one looks forward to the picture with a distinctly different kind of curiosity from that with which one expects, say, a new Garbo or Chaplin or Dressler film.

I am writing in the dark, for up in the hinterland where I am the picture has not yet penetrated. But I thought it might be useful to say a word about the story for people who propose to see the film without having read the novel. There will be a good many of them.

* * *

Probably Follows Book

It has been a commonplace in the history of moving pictures that one goes to see a picture based on a popular novel only to find it so changed and mangled that often there is nothing left but the title. In the old days of the silent pictures the excuse used to be that the screen could not adequately take care of "psychological" sequences, make subtle or complex motives clear in difficult situations, and all that. Accordingly, where Henry James, for instance, in "The Wings of the Dove," could give you a chapter of close analysis or intricate conversation about some psychic involvement, the silent pictures would have to scrap all that and substitute the old scene where the heroine rescues the hero from the burning sawmill amid a rain of bombs from the stolen airplane overhead.

The talkies helped all that. Mr. Dreiser, I take it, is not complaining because that kind of change has been made. I am convinced that the film will follow the story of the novel pretty exactly. I am sure that the treatment will be a scrupulously serious and faithful attempt to put Dreiser's monstrously long and detailed story into a picture. Much will have to be omitted, since Dreiser is a tartar for infinite detail at infinite length. But what is left will be honest and well-intentioned.

The difficulty will lie in getting over on the screen Dreiser's essential and central philosophy of life. His belief that the director has failed to do that lies, apparently, at the root of his dissatisfaction. What is that central idea of his?

* * *

The Folly of Sin

The average reader or auditor will almost certainly view this story as a preachment on moral responsibility. As you probably know, it is the story of a young boy, Clyde Griffith, without any adequate family, social, religious or educational background, never adequately taught or trained or disciplined to face life, who, following his ambition and his human desires, drifts into a situation, a choice of desires, from which he sees only one way out, the murder of a girl with whom he has become involved and who has trusted him. He compasses her death, half intentionally, half as a blunder, is caught, tried, condemned and executed in the chair.

Most people, like the State st. lawyer, will call the story an attempt to reinforce the age-old doctrine of moral responsibility. They will see in it a satisfying exposition of the traditional doctrine of sin and damnation. As such they should be considerably impressed.

I have an idea that the film, perforce, has had to take that attitude. It is the most human explanation; it is most familiar to us from past tradition; it is easiest to understand; it is to most people most ethically satisfying.

But Dreiser's intention in writing the novel was exactly the opposite! He wrote the book to show that there is no personal moral responsibility. The novel is a dramatization, so to speak, of Clarence Darrow's point of view about crime. It holds that the religious point of view, such as Clyde Griffith learns from his parents and from the clergymen in the prison, is only a muddling of the truth. The truth is, says Dreiser, that life is simply an experiment in bio-chemistry. Each person in the story behaves inevitably, without moral direction, as a chemical compound attracted or repelled by other compounds. There is no will, no purpose, no right or wrong, and, therefore, no sin and no moral responsibility.

That is what Dreiser wanted to show in the film. That is what, if my guess is right, you will NOT find on the screen.

And a Red-Headed Empress Was the Cause of It All

NAUGHTY EMPRESS HERSELF
It's little wonder that the third Napoleon took one look at her, and forthwith raised her to the throne, despite her chequered career.

EVEN IN 1867 EUGENIE MADE
Before the Napoleonic dynasty came tumbling down about the ears of its dashing red-haired Empress, the Eugenie hat was the only proper thing for the well-dressed woman. An artist of the times pictured these four belles out for a snow-trot behind old Dobbin, and in the background are General U. S. Grant and his orderly.

AMERICA "HAT CONSCIOUS"

THE EUGENIE HAT OF TODAY
You see it everywhere. This one is worn by Betty Russell, and it's almost a replica of those that set the fashionable ladies on their ears in the Second Empire.

EMPRESS EUGENIE WAS GAY REDHEAD

Study of Her Life Reveals Many Romantic Affairs

Women of 1931 are wearing saucy new bits of headgear that date back to the days of a famous red-head who, almost a hundred years ago, turned men's hearts with the original model.

All Paris was aflame then with the successes of the marvellous Spanish girl, whose coquetry was irresistible, whose admirers were countless, whose love intrigues were the favorite scandal of the time—until an emperor invited her to step up on his throne, and gossiping tongues were stilled by fear.

This is the first instalment of the life story of the Empress Eugenie.

By LAURA VITRAY

Empress Eugenie, eh?

Well, take it from us, the wages of sin may be death, but you can't always prove it by the prize-winning queens, real or beauty contest.

Some of them manage to snatch off the most desirable mates right after indulging in the most amorous indiscretions. Which probably goes to prove instead that old French adage about flesh being feeble.

Take the Empress Eugenie herself, who is much in the news this season. She was pretty lively in her day, and even after ending her span at the age of 85, she still seems to have some life in her, or at least an interest in hats.

How She Roped Emperor Napoleon the Third

The way she roped in the Emperor Napoleon the Third, though when all the flappers of not quite a century ago in Paris were hard on his trail, was hot news at the time that it broke.

The Empress, who was then just plain Mademoiselle Eugenie de Montijo, had hair the original Clara Bow shade (like Clara, she later used golden hair wash on it) and a heart whose capacity would put Clara's feebler organ to rout in any pulse-beating contest. It was rumored around Paris she had IT. . . .

All of which made the debutantes whose mammas were trying to marry them off very indignant, particularly when Champs Elysees columnists of the time inserted hints about Eugenie having done a lot of running around.

Oh, yes, little Eugenie—who was but five feet five, whose eyes were deep blue, whose face was a creamy white that never knew make-up, except for an eyebrow stick, whose lovely head was exquisitely poised and whose walk was a progression of graces—had done a lot of running around.

Eugenie Began "Running Around" a Bit in Spain

In Spain, where she began it, they said it was her red tresses that roped the gentlemen.

Red tresses were unusual in Madrid—but Eugenie, who had a nip of old Scotch in her from the start, came by them naturally. For, while her father was a Spanish grandee who had fought under the banner of France, her mother was the offspring of a Scottish grocer and wine merchant who had settled in Malaga.

Alas, Eugenie's first plunge into romance turned out so badly that she came near gracing a cemetery lot instead of the throne of France, and her ideas about turned up brims and ostrich plumes might never have been given to the world.

Eugenie and her elder sister had just been graduated from a dingy old Spanish finishing school where they had learned how to embroider and recite poems—to a house in Madrid that had nothing to remind you of a royal palace, unless it was the cracks in the ancient walls and the general absence of modern plumbing.

Family Entertained When Papa Was in Funds

When papa, then known as Don Cipriano, was in the money, they entertained—when he wasn't the girls galloped on rough unshod steeds across the country to the baronial manor of some highborn relative, who was good for a meal, anyhow.

Things were going from bad to worse, and the young ladies were going without stockings because of the awful runs in them, when Don Cipriano's elder brother died, leaving him the grandeeship and a reasonable amount of coin.

"Now, children," says their countess mamma, nee Kirkpatrick, "I'm going to have a dressmaker in for you, and I've ordered a new hall and stair carpet." Shortly after came the young and marriageable Duc d'Albe.

He liked both girls—but Eugenie fell for him hard. Missives flew between them and love trysts were the order of the day—rather of the night.

Along moonlit roads of old Madrid he and the saucy red-head strolled unchaperoned, her mother being notoriously careless about men herself.

Little Eugenie saw in the handsome young nobleman, whose lineage was so pure, whose morals were so ancient the fulfillment of a maiden's dream. When they snuggled together on a rustic bench near a ruined castle's moat, while his strong arm circled her svelt form, while his hand clasped her tiny white one, while his black eyes pierced the depths of her soul, and his lips, close to hers, breathed passion with a honeyed sauce, she thought she would die of ecstacy.

"Why wait too long for happiness?" she cried.

After a lot of that, the countess announced that the duke was coming to ask for her daughter's hand.

He came, and he asked it—but not the hand of Eugenie. He asked for the hand of the elder sister.

Eugenie retired to her boudoir and drank poison, which seemed the proper thing to do—and when the distracted family arrived, she refused to let them administer an antidote.

Finally the duke himself was brought to her couch to attempt to persuade her.

Leaning over her with a steely eye, in which was no trace of their erstwhile idyll, he inquired:

"Where can I find my letters?"

Eugenie Plans to Wed Man Greater Than Duke

That settled it, and the red-head gulped down the life-saving drug. Glaring furiously at the young ninecompoop, she said:

"Sir, you wield a spear that is like Achilles'. It cures the wound it makes. I shall marry a greater man than you."

She let her sister lead him afterward while she set about to fulfill her threat. Of course, there were a few little trial romances before she went to housekeeping in the Palace of the Tuileries.

We'll tell you about those tomorrow.

THREE CAUGHT IN AUTO CHASE

Although once crowded into a telegraph pole and damaging the police car, Sergt. Joseph F. Small of Somerville police captured three youthful alleged auto thieves early today after a chase from Somerville into Cambridge, during which he fired two shots.

The men captured gave their names as John F. Brady, 21, of Merriam st., Somerville; George M. Ryan, 24, of Belmont st., Somerville, and Frank J. Murphy, 23, of Harold st., Somerville.

In Somerville court all three were charged with larceny of an automobile owned by Antonio Calfri of Somerville and were each held in $1000 for a hearing Thursday. Brady was also held on charges of operating without a license and refusing to stop on signal of a police officer.

Injured by Fall

Belief that Frank Barnes, 31, of 9 Knapp st., Somerville, who was found lying unconscious in an alley at 194 Brookline st., Cambridge, had fallen from a loading platform of a factory, was expressed by the Cambridge police after an investigation.

BANKERS CAST DOUBTS UPON CURLEY PLAN

Spending of surplus funds that Mayor Curley asks of savings bank depositors met with both commendation and opposition today by Boston bankers.

The mayor's suggestion that the bankers urge their depositors to withdraw surplus funds, thereby circulating the money and promoting business, was not considered an advisable one by several Hub financiers.

They agreed that in theory, it may have something of merit, but as a practical proposition "there's nothing to it."

"Mayor Curley is right when he says there is an abundance of money in savings banks," a vice-president of the Atlantic National Bank explained. "There is no question about this. And the banks have it because the money is lying idle and not being invested because of the business conditions.

"I see some merit in the mayor's suggestion, when one makes it an individual question. However, as a general proposition, to advise depositors in a wholesale way to draw out savings or a part of it and spend it, seems to me unwise."

"I don't feel it is right to ask depositors to dig into their savings account just to get the money into circulation," Robert E. Fay, vice-president of the Exchange Trust commented.

"Savings accounts are primarily for the protection of the unforseen and unexpected accidents of life. No one can estimate the savings necessary to compete with such future trials.

"The mayor's idea theoretically may be all right, but practically it is wrong."

QUINN UP SOON, DOCTORS SAY

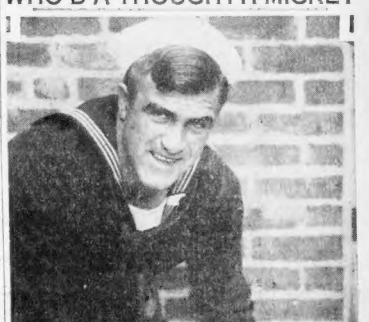
Edward W. Quinn, former mayor of Cambridge, has passed the crisis of his illness and is out of danger, according to an announcement made by Mrs. Quinn today.

The former mayor slept well last night and doctors expressed the belief that he would be sitting up in a few days.

Mayor Russell has set a detail of patrolmen at the Quinn home, 105 Fresh Pond parkway, to divert traffic.

Hundreds of close friends, including His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell and Mayor Curley, have visited Mr. Quinn.

WHO'D A THOUGHT IT MICKEY



"Mickey," the cat at the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. in Charlestown, fooled the boys there a long time, but now the secret is out. Yesterday five tiny kittens came along, and now "Mickey's" name goes into the discard for one of a more appropriate nature. Clarence Hahn of the U. S. S. Herndon is shown with "Mickey's" sons or daughters, or both. (Staff photo.)

Injured Girl Held on Lynn Charges

Miss Mary Fades of Temple st., Revere, was taken into Lynn court today from Lynn hospital on charges preferred after she was injured in leaping out a window on Neptune st., Lynn, August 22.

She told police she jumped to escape attention of Carl Stanley, said to be a coast guardsman. She was held in $200 until September 10 and returned to the hospital.

Requiem Mass for Rev. Dr. Van Allen

A solemn high mass of requiem for the Rev. William Harmon Van Allen, who was 26 years its rector, was celebrated today in the Church of the Advent, Mt. Vernon and Brimmer sts., Back Bay.

The Rev. Dr. Julian D. Hamlin, present rector, was celebrant, with the Rev. C. O. Hicks as deacon and Layman W. W. Jaskill, a member of the church corporation, as sub-deacon. Suffragan Bishop Samuel G. Babcock gave a blessing.

DAILY TRUE STORY

GIGOLO WANTED

CYNTHIA RETURNED THE PRESSURE OF HIS ARMS

"PARDON ME," the tall handsome young man asked the very pretty hostess at the tea dance pavilion. "Is this the place that advertised for a—er—professional dancing partner—that is, in short—a gigolo?"

The young lady blushed to the roots of her curly, blonde hair and said solemnly: "Well, mother and I have been considering hiring a few professional partners, hoping to stimulate trade. You see, so many more women than men are free in the afternoon, and some of the elderly ladies get bored. Nobody wants to dance with them, and so they leave or don't come, and—" She stopped, suddenly embarrassed.

"I know how it is," said the young man, his grey eyes twinkling. "I'm particularly nice with middle-aged ladies. In fact, they are my specialty. And I'm a fairly good dancer, too. But the main thing is, my line of conversation ought to qualify me as a first class ladies' man."

"I mean I know how to flatter women, how to say just the right thing to make their eyes shine. I assure you that if you hire me I will not only not lower the tone of this very select establishment; I might say I'll add a note of chic and interest."

"Well," the girl smiled in spite of herself. "You have an excellent opinion of yourself. If mother's willing, I'll engage you. Frankly, I'm sick of interviewing candidates. Most of them are so impossible. I simply tell them the place is filled. Do you dance well enough?"

Dancing Expert
He Was Quickly Hired

"Try me and see," said the effervescent gentleman. The orchestra at that moment swung into a dreamy tango. Three or four couples stepped onto the floor. Half a dozen elderly ladies watched them with bored, hungry eyes. The professional partner put his arm gently about the girl's waist, drew her on to the dance floor.

He hadn't underestimated his dancing. Everyone inthe room watched them, the orchestra seemed to be playing only for them.

"Why, you're really an expert," the girl said, breathless with amazement at the end of the dance. It was—wonderful."

"Merely because I had your charming help. How could anyone help dancing well with you?"

"I—I guess I'd better engage you. You say just the right things, too."

"It would be impossible not to say charming things to a girl like you. You make me wish the English language weren't so limited. I want to tell you in an entirely new way how beautifully soft and brown your eyes are and—well, I could talk to you all day about yourself—"

"You're hired," she said weakly. "We'll talk over terms with mother."

The new dancing partner had only one fault. He paid too much attention to the young hostess, hovering about her table, begging her for dances when his own program was not filled.

"But you shouldn't," she said. "Mother doesn't like it. You see, we don't really approve of you—we—we fought against hiring a professional partner, but something had to be done to help business, and it does seem to be working out well."

"Just a financial necessity," the tall young man said sadly.

"Oh, don't say that, although, Mr. Curtis, if I hadn't met you this way, I'd never in the world have believed you to be anything but—"

"A strong, staunch he-man?"

"Well, yes."

"That's where you're cruel, judging by appearances. How do you know what motives impelled me to answer your ad? I may have been on the verge of starvation."

"You don't look it."

"Come on outside, and let's talk about ourselves."

Cynthia saw her mother frowning from a doorway, but something made her obey the dictates of the tall young man. Something made her let him take her home that night in spite of her mother's disgusted protests, and at the door something made her say, "Why do you do this for a living, Mr. Curtis? When I saw you tonight dancing with those silly women, making them giggle and simper, telling them flattering lies, I hated you. Then when you told me the same lies —I—well—I—"

"That just proves they aren't lies. Cynthia nobody could lie to a girl like you. Why don't you accept me for what I am—why do you fight against liking me? It's a losing fight. I warn you."

Cynthia hated to tell him. It was after 5 p. m. when she worked up her courage, little more than 24 hours after he had come to her and applied for the job and been pressed into immediate service. Mother was glaring at Cynthia.

"Mr. Curtis," Cynthia said, "I hate to tell you, but mother and I, well, we decided we'd rather not have the increased business if we have to get it in this way. It doesn't seem quite right, and so we'll have to—"

"Fire me?"

"Yes." She couldn't face him, and see the hurt look that would come into his laughing grey eyes. She looked up, astonished, when he burst out laughing, when he held both her hands in his and said, "Thank you!"

Won the Wager
Not Really a Gigolo

"What do you mean?"

"I mean thank you for not firing me half an hour ago. You would have cost me just $500 if you had. It's this way—one of my waggish friends passed your place with me last night before last. We saw you sign. It amused him. He bet me $500 I couldn't land the job and stick it out in 24 hours. I made the same bet with him. You weeded him out among the first dozen candidates—and chose me.

"He'll add the life out of me for being such a bowling success. He came here this afternoon and saw me. I had to squelch him to keep him still. But it's worth $500—the experience alone is worth that—meeting you is worth a lot more."

A slow smile broke over Cynthia's face. "So you're not—I was right after all—my instincts were right. I told mother so. I said you must need the money badly or something. Oh, come on, let's tell her."

They told Cynthia's astonished mother. "And now," said the ex-gigolo, "may I have the pleasure of dancing with your daughter in a non-professional capacity?"

They danced again and again, the music was made for them. Tom Curtis whispered to Cynthia as they walked out into the moonlight at the end of the dance, "I'm really a very respectable lawyer; at least I will be when my next year at law school is ended—that is, if some other profession doesn't tempt me too much. I'll be having a position myself that I won't filled soon, perhaps you know an applicant. Someone to take care of; in short, to marry a very green, very inexperienced, not yet full-fledged lawyer. Know anyone who might eventually take the job?"

She looked up at him and smiled, returning the pressure of his arms. "I think I do," she said.

GIRL ATTACKED OVER RODMAN SLAYING

BEATEN BY PAIR WHILE ON AN AUTO RIDE

Back Bay Victim Accused Her of Knowing How the Slain Racketeer Met Death

A girl who police say was beaten up in an automobile in the Newburyport turnpike last night by two men who seemed to know a lot about the murder of "Big Jack" Rodman, racketeer, was taken to headquarters today for questioning by Deputy Supt. James McDevitt.

To police who went to her apartment in Queensberry st., after receipt of a mysterious telephone tip, she said she was Wilhelmina Whittemore, 34. She is a brunette and formerly lived in New York city.

"I know nothing about the Rodman shooting," she told Sergt. Maurice Sullivan and Special Officer Joseph Condon.

"But last night I went riding with two men whose acquaintances I had made, both living in the North End, and they beat me and cried, 'You know what happened to Rodman, don't you?'"

She claimed to have jumped from theautomobile only to be captured and placed back in it. Then she was taken home, she said.

NORTH END COMBED

With her in the apartment, according to police, was Max Shepp, 34, of New York city, who was also questioned briefly. The girl said she came to Boston four weeks ago.

Meanwhile police are combing the North End for the slayers of Rodman, who was shot to death in Audubon rd., Back Bay, last Thursday night.

The trail turned to this section yesterday, when police learned at Rodman's funeral that the undertaker had been warned there would be trouble if the cortege passed through the North End.

The undertaker, Jacob Stinetsky, said no plans had been made to pass through the North End.

FRIENDS QUESTIONED

Inspectors John D. Holmes and Benjamin Goodwin attended the funeral and mingled with the 50 odd mourners.

Two intimate friends of Rodman were picked up and brought to headquarters. They were released after being grilled regarding Rodman's activities in Boston's underworld, where he was an acknowledged bootlegger.

Johnny Wilson, former middleweight boxing champion, whose name had been linked in the case, was eliminated yesterday after he appeared at the Back Bay station and presented an alibi.

Brown, Long Sought for Slaying Wife in Fall River, Arrested in Tennessee

Fall River's great "trunk murder" mystery of 1918 was revived today with the arrest of William Brown, husband of the slain Mrs. Annie Brown, in Johnson City, Tenn., by Massachusetts state detectives.

Considered one of the most brutal crimes of its kind in the annals of the state, the murder has remained dormant for the past 13 years.

Brown, who fled nine days after the crime, has been the object of a country-wide search and was located today through his application to Washington for pension.

Mrs. Brown's dismembered body was found floating in the waters of Taunton River, in July, 1918, having been strangled and beaten to death in the room shared by the couple in Fall River.

A Spanish War veteran, Brown had been receiving pension money from the government, but application for the money stopped after he disappeared.

A week ago, Washington officials notified Massachusetts police that an application from Brown had been received. Detective Francis W. Clemmy and Trooper Timothy C. Murphy were immediately dispatched to Johnson City. They found Brown in the National Home there, and arrested him.

Bristol County Grand Jury indicted Brown for murder in February 1918, and the search was redoubled.

Investigation of the murder began when a human arm was found in Taunton River, and a short time later other parts of a body floated to the surface.

When identification was finally made, a search of the room occupied by Brown and his wife revealed a blood-stained trunk, and blood-stains on the floor and furniture.

Quincy Man Found Dead in His Garage

Ray Harris, 45, of 4 Sterling st., Quincy, was found dead in the garage in the rear of his home, today, victim of carbon monoxide. James Young, 12, a newsboy, discovered the body and notified police.

Harris went to the garage to change a tire. He is survived by his wife and two children, Priscilla, 9, and Charles, 1.

MAYOR GREETS FORESTERS

Mayor Curley today welcomed more than 1000 delegates from all over the country to the 22d convention of the Foresters of America in the Hotel Bradford.

John Mack, supreme chief ranger of the order, presided at the informal opening. The convention will adjourn Wednesday.

Dr. Joseph Santosuosso, general chairman, outlined the program for the three days, which will include a variety of entertainment every evening, a historical bus trip through Boston, a banquet for all delegates tomorrow night, and several general business meetings.

WELCOME, FORESTERS!

Melody of Boston, Dr. Joseph Santosuosso, general chairman of the committee, and Thomas M. Donnelly of Jersey City, N. J., supreme secretary of the order.

BLIND MOTHER MAY LOSE AID

Fear that she and her blind and invalid mother may lose their city aid through her arrest with William J. Manning, who is charged with the murder of an elderly Roxbury storekeeper, was voiced today by Mrs. Ruth Eugenie Larsen, 27, of Newman st., South Boston.

Mrs. Larsen, mother of an eight-year-old boy, who also lives in the Newman street house, was arrested last week charged with a serious offence with Manning, described as a boarder in the house.

According to Mrs. Larsen, she has been informed that a movement is underway to take away their city aid, which is their sole means of support.

Her elderly mother has been blind for several years, is crippled and is attended constantly either by her daughter or grandson.

Five Youths Hurt in Hit-and-Run Crash

Minor injuries were suffered early today in Old Colony blvd., Dorchester, by five youths, when their car was crowded off the roadway and overturned by a hit-and-run sedan.

The youths, all of whom were treated in City Hospital, were Frank McGrath, 17, of Putnam ave., Cambridge, and John Ray, 18, of Third st., Joseph Stute, 21, Fellsway, Joseph Amatte, 18, Leo st., and Daniel Bouchie, 17, Radbury ave., the driver, all of Medford.

Mrs. Linville Hall Is 90 Tomorrow

Mrs. Linville John Hall, member of one of the oldest Boston families, will celebrate her 90th birthday tomorrow in the home of her sister, Miss Florence E. Tower, in Auburndale.

Her mother, Olive Gould (Chubling) Tower of Boston celebrated her own 90th birthday in the same house. Mrs. Hall's husband, a Methodist minister, went West in the gold rush of '49, and his book, "Round the Horn," is still widely read. Mrs. Hall has been a resident of Springfield for many years.

Foes of Chelsea Oil Farm Tongue-Lashed

Politicians protesting the permit granted by Revere city council for an oil farm in Chelsea Creek, Revere, were verbally lashed today by Atty. Francis T. aeLyh in concluding argument for the licensees before State Fire Marshal ohn W. Reih.

Leahy said that though a great deal had been told about people opposed to the permit, only 38 were present on the public hearing day set aside for the special benefit and three-fourths of them were from East Boston.

STATE CHECKS ON ALIEN LABOR

The state department of labor and industries has mare 1160 inspections of jobs let out to contractors to see that the state law relative to preference for citizens is being enforced.

Commissioner E. Leroy Sweetser said today the tunusual care was taken because of instructions from Gov. Ely directing that where aliens are employed contrary to law prosecutions be made.

"Any man in need of work can get a job with a contractor if he will call to our attention the fact that an alien is being employed," he said.

News of Job Brings Malden Party Back

WOMEN Height Feet	Inches	Weight Pounds	MEN Height Feet	Inches	Weight Pounds
4	10	116	5	3	133
5	11	118	5	4	136
5	—	120	5	5	140
5	1	122	5	6	144
5	2	124	5	7	148
5	3	127	5	8	152
5	4	130	5	9	156
5	5	134	5	10	161
5	6	138	5	11	166

5	8	146	6	1	178
5	9	150	6	2	184
5	10	154	6	3	190

Consult table for your normal weight. Multiply that by:
15 if you take no exercise.
17 if you take light exercise.
19 if you take moderate exercise.
22 if you do muscular labor.
25 if you do severe labor.

You then have the number of calories for your daily food requirements if you were not overweight.

From this number subtract 1000 calories—and you have your proper reducing diet. A safe reducing diet provides for you to use 1000 calories a day for the fat stored in your body.

ONE OF THREE CHILDREN, BELIEVED KIDNAPED, IS FOUND

'BUT DON'T DO IT AGAIN'

BYRD DOG ONLY BIT DUTIFULLY

"The early bird gets the worm" —and sometimes more. This one got a bite.

When "Benny," a large Eskimo dog, owned by Admiral Richard E Byrd, bit Timothy Harron, 38, of Lake st Arlington Saturday morning, he was performing his duty as a watchdog at the pier of the bark City of New York, Admiral Byrd's South Pole ship.

The statement was made today by Jack Buda, of the ship's crew, who wished to make clear the misunderstanding in connection with accounts of the biting.

Harron, according to Buda was on the pier a half-hour before the ship was opened for inspection for the day. "Benny" evidently thought, as dogs do, that he had his duty to perform. Harron was treated for a gash on his right leg.

NO CLUES TO MISSING BOY AND GIRL

Dorchester Mystery Only Partly Solved as Somerville Child Is Located

With the discovery of Frances Westlake, 12, of Somerville, police today concentrated their efforts on the finding of two other children who have mysteriously disappeared in the past two weeks

The young girl was found in Squantum today

All Dorchester aroused by fear of kidnapers, have demanded added protection from the police for their children

Two of the children, a boy and a girl vanished late Saturday afternoon from Dorchester streets. The third child, a girl, has been missing since Aug 14

GIRL IS FOUND

Frances, daughter of Mr and Mrs Charles F. Westlake of 9 Sunset rd., West Somerville, disappeared near the home of her grandmother, Mrs Frances A Keenan, of 18 Lyndhurst st., Dorchester

She was found at the home of Ludwig B Marker of 146 Hutchins ave., Squantum, by Quincy police

Sobbing and hysterical, Mrs Westlake, the girl's mother arrived at Mrs. Marker's home to claim her daughter

According to Mrs. Marker, the girl said she left her grandmother's home about 7 or 8 Saturday night and walked all the way to Squantum, a distance of 15 miles. She had some money with her. Mrs Marker a friend of the family thought the girl had come to spend the week-end and did not question her late arrival. She believed the child had the sanction of her parents in making the late visit

Mrs. Marker notified Quincy police after reading of the girl's disappearance and alleged kidnaping in the newspaper.

The vanished boy is Walter Noonan, 5, a State ward, who has been living with Mr. and Mrs Patrick Sheehy, of 81 Westville st He was walking with Cornelius J. Danehy, brother of Mrs. Sheehy, in Westville st. when he was joined by two small girls The trio ran to the corner and when Danaher reached the scene, they had vanished

ON WAY TO LIBRARY

While search for these two children was being made by police it was revealed that officers of the Mattapan station had been seeking Iona Mercier, 14, of 78 Spencer st., who disappeared Aug. 14 after starting for a branch library to return a book. The Mercier girl was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph B. McGlory when she was an infant.

The Westlake girl disappeared a short time before her mother arrived at the grandmother's home to take her back to Somerville. She was last seen about 8 p. m. sitting on the steps of an adjoining house While preparations were being made for her return home she ran toward Washington st. and vanished

The Sheehy family with whom the Noonan boy has been living, believe his mother is involved in his disappearance. Although a resident of New York, she has been seen in Boston in the last few days. Police are also seeking a tall, dark man, seen loitering in the district for two days preceding the boy's disappearance.

Whelton Stricken by Heart Attack

Daniel A. Whelton, who acted as mayor of Boston, following the death of Mayor Patrick A. Collins was admitted as a patient to the Faulkner Memorial Hospital, yesterday morning, suffering from what is believed to be heart trouble

He was stated at the hospital last night that Mr. Whelton's condition has not been fully determined.

INNOCENT GANG VICTIM

Miss Jennie Ballantino, 17, shot down during a gang feud in Brooklyn, N. Y., showing her mother her bandaged arm. One of the flying bullets plowed through the girl's wrist. More than 200 children saw the shooting, which occurred near a moving picture theater. (International Newsreel photo.)

Water Torture Charged by Maine Convicts

Lining up 37 men in six cells and playing water on them at a force 80 pounds per square inch was one of the methods used in the State Prison at Thomaston, Me., to punish prisoners who had violated prison rules, it is charged by two escaped prisoners

Two men, William Merrill, alias Robert Austin, and Roy Cook, alias Patrick McCarthy, being held at the Middlesex County jail at Cambridge told the story of inhuman treatment given them in Maine which caused them to bind a guard and break away from the prison on August 15.

They are now fighting extradition requested by Governor Gardiner.

For yammering to express their hard feelings against the removal of minor privileges, the 37 men, suspected of making noise, were forced by guards into six small cells, Merrill and Cook said, and the fire hose was played on them.

4 CONVICTS DROPPED

One of the group braced himself against the cell door to shield the others in his cell, but was buried across the floor by the force of water, according to Merrill.

When four of their number fainted, the prisoners pleaded with the guards for mercy, but were knocked down by a still greater volley of water, ordered by Warden Linscott the two men claimed

The four who collapsed were victims of tuberculosis, Merrill said.

"After a half hour of the water torture," Cook related "Linscott even then told us that he felt we had not had enough. For two hours we swept water out of the cells, which had filled to a depth of three feet.

STEAM FOLLOWS WATER

"We placed the men who fainted onto the beds in the cells and tried to cover them, but the guards only forced more water mercilessly on us.

"Then they forced steam into the room on the pretense of trying to dry the place out. The only opening to allow fresh air was that from a broken window pane.

"We were almost suffocated from the steam. In the meantime we were lying cramped up on the wet floor to get the little air possible."

Following their release from the water treatment, Merrill said, the convicts spent 30 days in the "dog hole," solitary confinement, on a bread and water diet.

The First Time

I saw lace top stockings I was intrigued with their daintiness but couldn't quite see how I could afford them. Just last Saturday I had a happy surprise when I noticed a sign in the Queen Quality Shoe Shop was selling "Lacette" stockings. So I went in to inquire, and found that for this week only they are offering these new type stockings (the original lace design in chiffon weight for only $1 a pair, two pairs for $1.85! You know, dear, the French were quick to introduce this idea in silk stockings, but it remained for an American manufacturer to put on the manufacture so that fashion and beauty could be combined with the quality and attractive price that American women demand. I was going to tell you about a pair of smart suede pumps I saw in The Queen Quality Shop, but you'll see them when you go in to get two pairs of the "Lacette" stockings. The Queen Quality Shoe Shop is at 158 Tremont St.

A LITTLE LOVE IS A DANGEROUS THING

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHEN A WOMAN ... a man ... of ... hoping he will ...

• • •

Woman may not be as original as man; but the playwright and fashion artists would find the world a pretty dull place if Eve had not discovered "sex-appeal," and invented clothes.

• • •

Some men are born ... talkers, others acquire it, and others simply know enough to say, "How - pretty - you - look - I - adore - you - in - that - dress - what - is - that - fascinating - scent - you - use," and pass as brilliant conversationalists.

HELEN ROWLAND.

• • •

A little love, like a little knowledge, is a dangerous thing. It is only when they come in wholesale quantities that they are worth sitting up evenings to cultivate.

• • •

... always ... when a woman ... on earth she ever got ... and a man wonders how on earth ... ever got out of it.

• • •

If a man looks flattered when you call him a "cynic," he is under 25; if he looks flattered when you call him "Big Boy," he is over 40; and if he looks flattered when you call him God's Gift to Women, he is over 50.

• • •

... that bothers most men about ... is possible to love two women at ... but ... is possible to love ONLY two.

• • •

It is wonderful what love will do for a man! It will sometimes make him think of something beside himself for a whole afternoon!

No man was ever yet discouraged by the length of a girl's "waiting list."

"YOUR EMPLOYERS," continued Collin "gave you the benefit of the doubt, whereupon you distinguished yourself by a very indiscreet, very sentimental—flirtation, let us call it, with a native who was employed in a minor capacity about the school.

"You interested yourself in his welfare, you gave him lessons in English, you entertained yourself with . shall we call it getting back to nature—with Hawaiian nature? The man was young, handsome and gifted. He was also a rather simple soul. He understood that you were willing to marry him. When you refused, in righteous anger and horror, he made a scene. A scene which nearly cost you your life. When it came to the ears and eyes of the school directors, you were immediately persuaded to sail for San Francisco."

"Yes," he answered shortly, "otherwise I would not have made my accusations."

"Your mother knows?" asked Fanchon and leaned forward, curiously intent upon his answer.

"Well naturally," he answered in some astonishment. "People ... acquaintances of hers who knew your relationship to us, and who happened to be in Hawaii and to have heard the gen... at ... which determined her to write you and ask you to make your home with us. She did so, therefore after you had been in San Francisco a time. It took her a little while to ... to find out your address after you had left the school. Naturally, you left no forwarding address. She said ... that you should be given your chance. I agreed.

"She therefore wrote you and asked you to come. But in your acceptance and in your subsequent letters you told her nothing, made no mention of the circumstances under which you had left Hawaii.

"That I confess somewhat antagonized me. I was willing," said Collin, "to overlook all that had gone before, your parents' attitude toward my mother, and what was at the time, obviously your own. Loyal to them you were. I could understand that, for I was loyal to my mother.

"But this silence, this ... acceptance of everything my mother offered, I must say, having read your letters, a most ... and I-deserve-it pose, was not calculated to make me wish to receive you with friendship."

Fanchon said slowly, not heeding him:

"So she knew—all the time!"

"Yes, of course," Collin answered, impatiently.

He was astonished to see the girl's mouth quiver, her eyes mist over. He could not know that her heart was going out to Jennie Carstairs in a rush of warm, ... gratitude. She was remembering the way in which Jennie had taken her to her heart; she was remembering the utter lack of reproach, of mention of any of this story to her. She was recalling Jennie's embarrassed little apology for what she knew Collin's attitude would be... "loyal," she had said of him. But she had not mentioned by word, look or gesture the things she knew about Evelyn Howard. She had merely waited for the girl herself to confess. The confession had not come, yet Jennie had not changed one iota toward her in her attitude of affection and consideration.

"Well," asked Collin, "have you anything to say—for yourself? Have you anything—to tell my mother—in your own defense?"

"Just a moment," said Fanchon, suddenly. "Please tell me by what right you set yourself up as a judge of me? Is your own life so—perfect—that you can afford to judge and condemn me, Mr. Carstairs?"

He had the grace to flush.

"No, I don't condemn you . . . what you did . . . or left undone," he said slowly, "I simply condemn your attitude of self-righteousness toward my mother. That's all."

Fanchon said:

"I see. There is no use in my trying to deny your accusations. I think I know you well enough, even in this brief time, to realize that you would not have accepted mere hearsay. I am right, am I not, in concluding that you have been in communication with—" she hesitated, realizing that she did not know the name of the school or the people who ran it—"with those quite conversant with the situation," she went on, after a brief pause.

He nodded. His eyes were intent upon her own. Hers did not falter in their brilliant blue gaze, very direct, very lovely.

"I have nothing to say in my defense," Fanchon went on, "except that it is possible that appearances were against me."

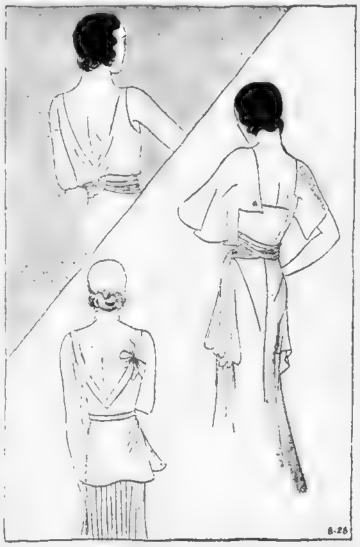
DECOLLETE BACKS

Chosen for Originality

SKETCHED IN PARIS



Three arrangements for the back decollete are chosen from the collections and sketched because of their originality. At the upper left is a draped bolero-bodice from Redfern.

Jealousy of Wife Kills Happiness

By WINIFRED BLACK.

NORA IS JEALOUS.

Fearfully jealous.

She's in love with her husband, or she thinks she is, and she doesn't want him to love anything on earth or anybody but her.

Winifred Black

Nora would like to take her Freddie to a desert island and wall him up in a tower and put two tigers and a lion at the foot of the tower stairs and keep her Freddie all for herself.

Nora likes life and she likes gaiety, and she likes pretty clothes, and fine furniture and Nora likes music. But Nora would give up every one of these things and go and live on a desert island with her Freddie if she could just wall him up in a tower and sit down on the steps of the tower and think to herself:

There, now, I'd like to see anybody get one look at my Freddie."

Nora is jealous of Freddie's partner, because Freddie knew his partner in college before he knew Nora, and oh! how Nora hates that!

And Freddie has rather a nice old aunt who was good to him when he was little, and his mother died; so Freddie's fond of Aunt Susan.

Awfully fond of her, and Susan means to him home and mother, and a warm fire on winter evenings, and a cool bath on hot summer days, and nice scarey stories told at twilight on the old porch shaded by the tall cottonwood tree that whispers and shushes all night long.

So Freddie really loves poor old Aunt Susan and nobody reasonable could be jealous of a woman like her. She isn't even sweet-looking. She's not witty. She doesn't dress so very well. She's just sort of comfortable and good-humored. She honestly loves Freddie, and she can not think why Nora hates her so. It's simple enough, Nora is jealous of her. She can't bear to hear her Freddie talk about another human being—but her.

Nora is jealous of Freddie's dog and jealous of the pipe he bought in England. She thinks somebody gave it to him, or else he bought it when some mysterious somebody was with him. Anyhow, he has an expression in his eyes when he is smoking it that Nora simply can't bear.

Freddie has thrown away his pipe and he's given away his dog, and now he's going to snub poor good old Aunt Susan just to please Nora.

I wonder if she's worth it.

I wonder how long Freddie can make himself believe that any woman in the world is worth such an uncomfortable, nagging thing as his life has become?

What do you think?

GRAND HOTEL

By VICKI BAUM

"FOR THE TIME?" Gaigern asked in a whisper. "Will nothing . . happen? Isn't it dangerous?"

"No, our friend will have to jog along for a bit yet. He has many a caper like this to go through before he is left in peace.

His ... see his heart's all there. It's ... alive and kicking, and it won't shut up shop yet. It's a machine that's not been much used, Herr Kringelein's heart. A lot has gone to h... round about, but the heart ... insists on its rights. So the marionette must dance on while the last string holds. Cigarette?"

"Thanks," said Gaigern, and absent-mindedly took one. "And so he's really in a bad way? And can't die all the same? Seems a ghastly business."

Otternschlag, who had nodded in reply to each question, replied: "Just so. That's it. That's why I value my little black case so highly. You cannot really put up with all the pain that being on this earth entails unless you know that any moment you can make an end of it. Life is a miserable sort of existence, believe me. You must be able to die when it suits you, when you please."

"But who wants to die?" Nobody," said Gaigern quickly and with conviction.

"Well——" said Otternschlag, and swallowed something down. Kringelein was muttering unintelligibly under his drooping mustache. "Well—look at me, for example," said Otternschlag. "I am a suicide, you must understand. As a reule you only see suicides after the event—when they already have turned on the gas or pulled the trigger. I, as I sit here, am a suicide before the event. To put it in one word, I am a living suicide—a rarity, you will agree. One of these days I shall take 10 of these ampoules out of this box and inject them into my veins—and then I shall be a living suicide no longer.

"I have no complaint to make of life. I find it splendid," Gaigern said lightly.

"Indeed? You find it splendid" And yet you were in the war. And then you came home, and then you find life splendid?" And what, man, have you done about it all? Have you forgotten it all? There—we won't talk of what it was like out there. We all know well enough. But how can you come back after that, and still say you're pleased with life? Where do you find it—this life of yours? I have looked for life, but I can't find it. I often think to myself: I'm dead already. A shell has torn my head from my shoulders, and I'm sitting as a corpse all the time buried in that dug-out at Rouge Croix. There you have the real and actual impression life makes on me ever since I got back."

Kringelein of a sudden was sitting bolt upright in bed. With a great effort he had got his drugged eyes open and he was looking for something.

"Where's my money?" he whispered. He had come straight from Fredersdorf and a quarrel with Anna, and it was with difficulty that he found his way back to the mahogany-furnished room of the Grand Hotel. "Where's my money?" he asked with parched throat.

"He deposited it with the management," said Gaigern.

"You deposited it with the management," Otternschlag repeated after him like an interpreter. Kringelein's dazed head tried to cope with this reply.

"Where's my money?" he persisted obstinately. "All that money? The money I won?"

Gaigern lit a cigarette and inhaled the smoke into his lungs.

"I want my pocketbook here," Kringelein demanded with outspread fingers. In his dream he had seen both life and money escaping from him.

Otternschlag sighed and got up. He felt in the pockets of Kringelein's coat which Gaigern had hung over the back of a chair, and found nothing. Gaigern stood at the window smoking with his back to the room and his face turned to the street—now silent in the white light of the arc lamps.

"There's no pocketbook there," said Otternschlag, and let his hands fall to his sides after this immense exertion.

In an instant Kringelein was out of bed, and there he stood in the middle of the room on his thin and tottering legs. His face was aghast and he was breathless.

"Where is my pocketbook?" he cried piteously. "Where is it? Where is all that money? Where, where is it? Where is my pocketbook? Where is my pocketbook?"

Gaigern, who had long ago taken possession of the pocketbook, tried to shut his ears to the plaintive clamor which arose shrilly. He hated Kringelein savagely at this moment; he would have liked nothing better than to murder him. He turned impetuously into the room, but the pitiful sight that Kringelein presented disarmed him. Kringelein was crying like a child. "There were six thousand two hundred marks in it," he sobbed. "You can live for two years on that." For Kringelein without knowing it had fallen back into the Fredersdorf scale of existence.

Otternschlag turned to Gaigern with a despairing gesture. "Where can his pocketbooks be?"

Worry Linked With Poor Health

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

TO BE AFRAID of a nervous breakdown is not at all uncommon. Many a person visits the doctor for help, admitting the one thing the matter is this particular fear.

Dr. Copeland

It seems strange that one should go to a doctor not to find out what is wrong but to tell him the nature of the ailment. In this matter, however, that is actually what happens.

Good health is a condition in which we live longest and in which we enjoy ourselves most. This desirable state can exist only when we give the body the necessary care and rest. But it is not enough to regard the physical aspects alone. It is equally as important to pay attention to the mental health.

It is impossible to rest if the mind is disturbed, worried or otherwise upset. Such a mental state is easily brought about by physical fatigue. It is true, too, that worry, undue excitement, nervous apprehension and fear are capable of producing definite damage to the body.

If you are working very hard make sure you are getting the necessary sleep ... or exercise ... Your diet is also very important. Hard work creates the demand for food, both palatable and easily digested. The diet should contain an abundance of fresh vegetables, fruits, milk, cream and butter. Get out of doors and, above all, get into the sun.

If you have not been working and are worried because of the present state of affairs, try to be philosophical about it. No matter what may be your financial state, it is just as important as ever to maintain your bodily health.

Worry will not help to get a new job. A long siege of worry won't help to hold a new job. Worrying ... and will render you ... able to undertake new duties as you should.

If you do not feel up to par, if you are easily irritated, apprehensive, if your mind is full of fear, consult with your physician. In all probability he will suggest rest and, if need be, prescribe the necessary tonic.

Fashion Notes

THERE IS no check to the popularity of the checked theme. It is the design used in a silk suit with a bolero jacket. The colors are blue and white and there is a belt of blue and white leather.

A HAPPY UNION is that of red and white for summer. Smart is a frock of red crepe with cap sleeves and a pleated skirt. It has a white suede belt and a sling collar of white crepe.

WE COTTON to cotton this season more than ever. Lovely is a dinner frock of pale blue organdy with a deep cape collar, edged with Valenciennes lace. The same lace makes the hem of the skirt.

Streaked Blonde Hair May Be Given Golden Tone

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

KEEPING BLONDE hair light is a beauty problem as old as the ages but it is one that never ceases to be of interest to the Sweethearts of the Sun as Florenz Ziegfeld has so aptly termed them.

Josephine Huddleston

There are so many different shampoos and rinses which have been formulated to solve the problem that a final choice should depend entirely upon the peculiarities of the individual need. Just what that need is can be determined only after a close inspection of the hair, followed by a study of various methods and their results.

For example most blondes find their hair turning a little darker each year until finally their golden tresses have been completely replaced by ones of a light brown. This could have been avoided by the faithful use of the blonde hair shampoo which I worked out some years ago, the formula having appeared dozens of times in this column.

A second condition, increasing daily and resulting from the use of prepared washes or rinses for lightening hair, is an uneven coloring, some strands being almost straw color, others brassy in shade, while the new growth as it makes its appearance at the scalp shows a definite inclination toward brown.

The streaked effect is enough to bring despair to any feminine heart and is largely responsible for the paicky and careless application of the wrong preparation for the trouble, more real blonde hair troubles arising from after-treatment conditions than from natural causes. After all is said, it is far better to let the light brown hair reign supreme than to gain an uneven, harsh, artificial crown of glory by ill-advised attempts to regain the pure golden crown!

Therefore, at the cost of repeating myself until I bore you I'm going to write a series of articles giving you once again the specific details of caring for blonde hair.

The next article will have the formula for the blonde hair shampoo to be used as a method of keeping the hair from turning darker and that article will be followed by a resume of the various blonde hair rinses, with the times and methods of their application explained fully for best results.

Those of you who are interested will find those articles helpful for I'm going to do more than just give formulas . . . the "WHY" of any treatment is just as important as the directions and once we learn this a vast percentage of blonde hair troubles will be eliminated if that knowledge is applied.

Parking Wraps of Guests

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Which is correct? When we are having guests, where should their wraps be put, on the bed, as the bedroom is off the small entrance of our apartment, or in the guest closet, which is being used for my husband's clothes, and is also off the small hall?

MRS. B. L.

Since the guest closet is being used for your husband's clothes, it would seem best to use the bedroom for the place to leave the guests' wraps and have them leave them on the bed.

Reply to an "At Home" Card

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly inform me what is the correct thing to do after receiving a marriage announcement and an "At Home" card?

M.

When we receive the announcement of a marriage, it isn't really necessary to acknowledge it. However, I add quickly, if the bride or groom is a close friend, it would be natural that we would wish to write and offer our congratulations or best wishes, or both. (Congratulations to the groom, you remember, and best wishes to the bride.) The way this letter is worded would depend on the degree of your friendship. The note needn't be long and would include the usual wishes for happiness.

Charge It to Profit and Loss

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

If a young man loses a girl's ring and the girl wants the ring can she make him replace it or pay her for it?

MISS B.

I dislike to think that she will have to "make" him replace the ring, but if his manners do not extend this far in decency then she will have to decide between either letting the occurrence drop or being disagreeable about having the ring replaced. As a matter of fact, I suggest, urge even, that, faced with such an alternative, she will charge her mistake up to "profit and loss," mostly loss, and let it go at that.

Hints From the Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

LITTLE Pale face, whose complexion is too much of the lily and not enough of the rose should drink milk, lapping up a quart each day. She should also eat liver and plenty of green salads and fresh vegetables. Good grub is what makes the skin take on color, and good grub means a balanced diet. Of course dipping into the old rouge pot gives temporary blushes.

• • •

Poor grade powders should be avoided; they produce blackheads. The soiled powder pad is another miscreant among the galaxy of toilet accessories. A paste made of peroxide and kaolin is good to banish blackheads. Let remain on the skin for 15 minutes.

• • •

There are plenty of foods that the plumpish girl can eat that will satisfy her appetite and not add once ounce to weight. Potatoes are starchy, therefore should be avoided, but all the other vegetables are safe. Lean meats are to be preferred to fat ones, except bacon from which the fat is cooked. Sweets are adipose makers, so go slow on bonbons.

A DIVISION OF NATIONAL DAIRY

Don't Fear Your Rivals, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

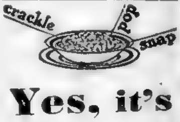
One night at a party I met a girl, an American girl, and loved her from the start. Now it surprised me that she returned my love because I am not what you could call good-looking, being rather fat, and having features that are not much to look at. Her mother objected to our love because of my foreign birth. After that, I was more determined to keep up my friendship with her daughter. I did, and she told me not to mind the ravings of her mother. And so all went well for a while.

But after some months she met another boy, and came to me to tell me that she loved him. Well, I gave her up without a word. I met and fell in love with two more girls, but gave them up in this manner.

Now, I'm madly in love with another. The feeling I have for her is not the same as the feeling I had for the others. But now, if another boy should come into her life, would it be right to let him have her? I love her dearly, as I said before, and it would break my heart to give her up.

GIVER.

Dear Giver: I am afraid you give up too easily. When you see a rival you become discouraged and probably step aside and leave the field to him. In this case, if you are sure that this girl is the one with whom you will always be happy, hang on and don't give anyone else a chance to make any progress. If you are in a position to marry, why not settle things that way?



Yes, it's different!

RICE KRISPIES is the only cereal that's so crisp it actually snaps when you pour on milk or cream.

Delicious toasted rice. Different for breakfast. And what a treat for lunch—with fruits or honey added! Kiddies love it. Use Krispies in candies, soups. At grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Babe Will Get New Contract at $80,000

Babe Ruth will get a new two-year contract with the Yankees calling for $80,000 a year. Make no mistake about that despite all the stories coming from New York to the effect Colonel Jacob Ruppert is planning drastic salary reductions on his ball club next season.

Ruth is knocking home runs under a two-year contract which expires next month. He is paid off at the rate of $80,000 a year. I say that 80 grand is only small change for a fellow who can pack the cash customers into the baseball orchards of the land like the great Bambino.

In Chicago recently the Yankees drew a record crowd of 52,000 persons playing against the last place White Sox. This was due to Ruth's presence in the Yankee lineup. When the Cubs were National League champions two years ago, they never attracted that number of cash customers through the turnstiles.

Ruth was responsible for 41,000 persons jamming Braves Field to see the Yankees play the Red Sox. In that series the total attendance was 90,000, which made Bob Quinn forget all about some of the tough spots he has been obliged to contend with since he came to Boston.

Ruppert may reduce the salaries of some of his players who are not producing, but he won't take a single nickel away from Babe unless he is daffy. And birds who get into the millionaire class are usually not in the habit of doing the wrong thing.

Ruth is 37 years old. When he rounds out two more years in baseball he will have completed 20 years in the big show. Babe says that at the end of that time he will be prepared to retire and become a manager. I don't doubt that the fence buster could become a great manager as he has baseball genius. He has never been known to make mistakes on the ball field.

Three years from now Babe will probably still be hammering out baseballs. He will get much more kick out of staying on the firing line as an active player than he would becoming a manager. So you may expect to see Ruth in the thick of the fight for quite a few more years.

Ruth used to pretend he had a lame arm when he was a pitcher with the Red Sox. He did this so that he could play every day in the outfield. He liked to get his cracks at the old agate each day.

You will probably hear many rumbles from New York during the next few months about what the Yankees are going to do with Ruth. But when the last statement has been made the Bam will sign a two-year contract calling for $80,000 a season. As a box office attraction Ruth is easily worth $100,000 a season.

Jimmy Johnston's Fine Italian Hand

I can see the fine Italian hand of Jimmy Johnston, Boy Bandit of Broadway, in the story that Ernie Schaaf and Jack Sharkey have come to the parting of the ways. When the Schaaf-Campollo bouts was postponed until tonight, Sharkey returned to Boston and then hopped to New Hampshire. Johnston took advantage of this situation to whisper the report that the reason why Sharkey left New York was because he had engaged in a hot verbal tilt with Schaaf. It was stated that Jack had offered to sell his half interest in the Schaaf management to the highest bidder.

I talked with Sharkey upon his return to Boston, and he had only words of praise for Schaaf. He came home so that he could enjoy a week-end in New Hampshire. He'll return to New York today and with Johnny Buckley and Al Lacy will be in Schaaf's corner when the latter starts tossing leather at Campollo. The story inspired by Johnston helped the dear old ballyhoo. New Yorkers are lukewarm to boxing right now, and the Schaaf-Campollo affair needs all the steam possible.

Billy Ames of the Boston Garden offered Johnston $5000 for the right to switch the Schaaf-Campollo tussle to this city, but the Boy Bandit only laughed at him. Johnston is at war with the New York Garden and so wouldn't consider an offer from its Boston subsidiary.

Apart from what tonight's show will draw, Schaaf will be presented with a golden opportunity when he faces the elongated Campollo. If he can clip the human string bean on the chin, he can write his own ticket for future matches.

Jackie Fields to Get Shot at Title

It wasn't news to readers of this column to hear that Jackie Fields will get the first shot at Young Jack Thompson's welterweight championship. Jack Kearns, who manages Fields, slipped us this information in New York last month and we handed it on to you.

An effort was made to match Thompson and Jimmy McLarnin, but this match ran for Sweeney. Kearns, who apparently has quite a lot of influence with Ray Alvis, Thompson's pilot, suggested to McLarnin that he first try to get by Fields in Chicago. The Irishman wouldn't have any part of Fields.

It looks very much as if Alvis, Kearns and Tommy McGinity, manager of Tommy Freeman, have agreed to freeze McLarnin out. Thompson, Fields and Freeman will engage in one of those round robins. For a time it looked as if Lou Brouillard, New England welterweight champion, was going to be admitted to membership in the welterweight league, but his entry was scratched. I understand that the initiation fee was set at $30,000 for a Thompson match here. Neither the Boston Garden nor Brouillard's management cared to toss so many iron men on the counter.

Mack Unlikely to Break Up His Team

There is considerable talk to the effect Connie Mack is going to dismantle the Athletics after this season. It is said that the Macks are so perfect that they are not making the money they would if they were not far out in front of the opposition.

Mack took the Elephant apart after it lost a World Series to the Braves in four straight games in 1914. The reason for that action was not because his team had become too perfect, but rather on account of the fact it was beginning to go back.

Pennant winning ball clubs are too difficult to build up for Mack or any other manager to step to bat and act the part of a wrecker.

Just now baseball owners are trying to secure new talent. No matter how well their clubs are going they know that sooner or later they will require new parts.

There are still millions to be made in baseball, but the big jack goes to the pennant winners and to the clubs that are just beaten out in the dash to the wire. If you need proof of the money in baseball, I call your attention to the recent dividend of 22 per cent declared by the Cardinals, who are leading the National League. I know many business men who would give three cheers if they were able to declare even a 5 per cent dividend this year.

WESTLAND TURNS IN 72 CARD

Beverly Country Club, Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP)—Jack Westland, Chicago district champion, shot a sensational 33, three under par for the first nine holes of Beverly today to set the pace for the field in the first round of qualifying play for the National Amateur Golf Championship.

Westland, a former intercollegiate star at the University of Washington, showed not the slightest respect for the reputed terrors of Beverly's greens.

He had birdies on four holes sinking putts of 10 to 20 feet on the second, fourth, sixth and eighth. His only loss to par was at the 858 yard, seventh playing against the wind, where he was short twice and needed six.

Westland was not quite so spectacular on the green starting back and dropped a stroke to par at the 11th and 12th. For 14 holes, however, he was still one under par.

School sports fall into the sports news again tomorrow when a number of high school football squads go through their opening practice sessions of the 1931 campaign.

Malden and Medford, suburban neighbors and old rivals, swing into grid work tomorrow when Hubba Collins drills his boys at Fulton st and Warren McGuirk takes up the coaching reins of Malden high at the Pearl st. stadium.

McGuirk succeeds the late Edmund Goodreau who died of infantile paralysis this summer. The new coach faces quite an assignment, for he is taking up his first head coaching job. Center, guard both ends and quarterback graduated at Malden, so McGuirk must find boys to take over these jobs.

Coach Collins of Medford is in for a tough early season grind, at least, for nine of his strong team of last year are gone. Collins teams have been slow starters, coming fast for the important part of the schedule each season, however, and Medford fans figure that Hubba will be able to mould another of his rugged elevens.

Garibaldi to Tackle Roebuck at Garden

Gino Garibaldi and Tiny Roebuck are ready for their finish wrestling bout which will be staged at the Boston Garden tomorrow night. It will be the second meeting between these huskies at the North Station sport palace. In their last contest here, Garibaldi received the decision at the end of 45 minutes of grabbing.

Roebuck feels he will even the score in their tussle tomorrow night.

Boston Driver Hurt in Race Smashup

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 31—Davis Anderson of Boston, noted young auto race driver, sustained a badly injured back, fractured left arm and serious wounds on the head in a bad smashup at Avon track here.

Anderson, with George Lyons of Woodbury as his mechanic, was thrown to the track when his car collided with one driven by Ted Darley of Waterbury. Jack Miller of Brooklyn, N. Y., driving another car close behind the crashing pair, ran over both Lyons and Anderson.

Lyons sustained a head injury, face cuts and a torn left leg, which physicians at St. Francis' Hospital stated must be amputated. Anderson, also at St. Francis' Hospital is expected to recover, but little hope is held for the life of Lyons.

JACK READY FOR 'ALL COMERS'

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 31 (AP)—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight boxing champion, said in a radio interview last night that he was ready to take on all comers.

His manager put in the reservation "if terms are right," and said Dempsey probably would continue exhibition matches until the first of the year, "when he ought to be able to take the best of them—Max Schmeling."

Dempsey, after a workout here in preparation for four rounds of exercise tonight with Cyclone Thompson, Yakima, Wash., and possibly three others, said that after an exhibition in Salt Lake City, Sept. 14, he would go to the champion gold mine at Midas, Nevada, for 10 days of "mucking" to get in condition.

And All Through the Land Is Heard the Thump of the Pigskin

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—The official opening of the 1931 gridiron season in the East takes place today, when the candidates for four college teams trot out on the field for their first pre-season drills. By the end of this week no less than 18 Eastern colleges are due to have their football squads at work, while the major movement toward gridiron practice begins with Labor Day, one week away.

Carnegie Tech, whose squad presents a considerable problem in rebuilding, leads the way today with Temple, Geneva, and Morris Harvey of West Virginia. With the start of the frosh football month, September, Army, Fordham, Georgetown and Columbia and several lesser institutions join the lists.

The size of the early program is seen in the fact that about 900 varsity candidates make up the 18 squads which begin their drills this week, close to 200 of them starting things off today.

900 IN 18 SQUADS

Army, which opens its practice tomorrow when the Cadets resume their academic work, has the biggest squad listed. Coach Ralph Sasse will have his entire varsity squad, 89 Men, on hand from the start. The squads of those colleges which have invited their "varsity" men back before the regular season opens average about 50. The distinction of having the smallest squad of the week goes to Loyola of Maryland, which expects only 25 men to turn out.

Whether or not the date of the season's first games has anything to do with the start of practice, most of the teams which begin their drills this week open their seasons on the same afternoon, September 26. Temple and Morris Harvey start a day ahead while Duquesne and Geneva meet in a night clash September 18. Manhattan, one of this week's practice group, does not play until October 3.

THE TRAINING SCHEDULE

Here is this week's schedule for the opening of football practice at Eastern colleges:

Aug. 31—Carnegie, Geneva (Pa.) Temple, Morris Harvey (W. Va.).
Sept. 1—Army, Fordham, Georgetown, Columbia, Rutgers, Westminster (Pa.) Catholic University.
Sept. 2—Manhattan, Loyola (Md.) Niagara, Buffalo.
Sept. 3—Providence, Duquesne.
Sept. 4—St. Thomas (Scranton, Pa.).

SCHAAF IS 2 TO 1 CHOICE TO CRUSH CAMPOLO

CLASS GIVES ERNIE EDGE TONIGHT

New York, Aug. 31 INS — Weather permitting, four candidates for the heavyweight championship will throw leather here tonight and tomorrow evening. Originally scheduled for last week, the bouts were postponed when the promoters were blinded by the sun while scanning the heavies for alleged rain clouds that never burst.

The quartet consists of Ernie Schaaf, Victorio Campolo, Charley Retzlaff and Steve Hamas. At Ebbets Field tonight, a wheezy used 12-rounder will send Ernie Schaaf against Victorio Campolo, likely opponent in the preliminary. Hamas was matched a few days ago at the expense of Vincent De Santo, imported from Italy to make a Roman holiday for the former Penn State star.

Retzlaff Battles Joe Sekyra

Retzlaff, boasting 21 knockouts in 35 starts, takes on Joe Sekyra, veteran local boxer from Canton, O., in a scheduled 10-rounder at the Queensboro stadium tomorrow night. The interesting point here is whether the 8-stone 7-pounder from Leonard A. Dundee, who has defeated the best boys in his class, and reaped a knockout over the hunks of Max Schmeling, Al Martino Max had just about reached the top on the fistic ladder, only to be stopped by Retzlaff.

This [illegible] pick up a few [illegible] on Campolo to [illegible] Schaaf for the Gauchoville in a desperate mood. Kept on the [illegible] to the gross [illegible] management, and threat [illegible] but he machine [illegible] of [illegible] who [illegible] gentlemen who have [illegible] fancy in the ring. Anyone [illegible] that a victory over Schaaf would [illegible] from the door and start [illegible] on the royal road to fame and fortune traversed in such [illegible] far fashion by his illustrious [illegible]-countryman, dead pan Lou Ambers.

Schaaf Is Favorite by Odds of 2 to 1

Despite the [illegible] fancy Campolo's chances tonight, students of boxing have no recourse but to pick Schaaf. The former sailor is as tough as they come, is a fair defensive boxer and packs a wallop dangerous enough to overcome the handicap of a [illegible] ring brain.

Schaaf's protege has won his last seven starts by knockouts, one of which were the real McCoy. But more important, he has acquired confidence that was conspicuous by its absence when he was given a boxing lesson by Jimmy Slattery.

Schaaf is a 2 to 1 favorite. And [illegible] Campolo's chances tonight against the [illegible] pursuit of the heavyweight [illegible].

A knockout for Campolo could [illegible] and unfavorable [illegible] short, biting punches [illegible] world series with Alston, the first half winners.

Schaaf is the best of condition due to inactivity and may fold up under Schaaf's body attack.

Sparta Wins Opener

Chicago, Aug. 31 (INS)—Sparta Soccer team, National League and Peel Cup champions, won its first game of the season, easily from the Macabee All Stars, 6-0.

Such a shot is made with a style and form which required of you no effort of understanding. Such a shot, provided [illegible] lessness than you think, represents the ultimate golfing goal which you are trying to reach. In just such a play you attain, for that moment, a tip-top golfing skill—but at the moment you don't know it. Make just one shot like that—and you can bridge almost the whole total of golfing troubles. If you grasp its significance, with one vast shortcut that should fetch you from your hacking

FIGHT ON FOR HUB TWI FLAG

The rain of last week so interfered with the Hub Twi League [illegible] that it will take the remainder of this week to settle the race.

Somerville's win over Newton Upper Falls yesterday completed Somerville's schedule with 20 wins and eight losses. The victory also put Newton Upper Falls and Allston out of the race for first honors, Newton has ten losses and Allston nine.

The [illegible] between Somerville and leading Tigers who in the [illegible] percentage column top Somerville's [illegible] who are a full game behind Somerville in games won and lost. There is a chance for a top deadlock which would force a three [illegible] the world series with Allston, the first half winners.

Cauliflower Chatter

Matchmaker Eddie Mack of the Argonne Club is trying to line up a suitable opponent for Stanley Poreda, Jersey heavyweight, who handed Babe Hunt a shellacking at the Arena. It isn't any easy task to get a heavyweight who possesses enough class to make things interesting for the Frank Flournoy entry.

The Boston Garden and Eddie Mack are both trying to sign Jack Dempsey for exhibition bouts in this city. The Tiger has proved a tremendous attraction since he started bowling over fourth and fifth raters.

Eddie Devine says Charley Parker, South End lightweight, has been signed to tackle Tony Aquaro of Lynn in a bout at Salem. Parker has been fighting in good form.

It is likely that Johnny Buckley will close for a bout between Ernie Schaaf and Tuffy Griffiths in Chicago next month. The show will be staged by Nate Lewis at the Chicago Stadium.

Billy Ames of the Boston Garden is trying to match Schaaf with Napoleon Jack Doyal. Andy Callahan with Lou Brouillard and Jack McCarthy with Jim Maloney.

With as great an array of fighters competing as there have had in their best shows this summer, Pilibey Post's amateur tourney here tonight and Friday night, promises to be [illegible].

Such stars as John Mendis, Taunton, 160 pounds; John Blanchard, Taunton, Joseph Calvi, Somerville and Eugene Hickey, Malden, 118 pounders; Joe Ponti Lawrence; Ralph Morgan, Roxbury and Joe Silver, Taunton, 126 pounds, have all entered, insuring those attending of witnessing some real hard battling.

GONYA, PRICE CLASH TONIGHT

North Shore boxing fans will see a light heavyweight slugging match tonight when Buster Price of Lynn and Billy Gonya of Worcester clash in the feature eight-rounder of the weekly show of the Salem A. A. at the North St. Rink.

Both of these youngsters have scored knockouts in their recent fights at the Salem club.

Al Venezia of Revere meets Tony Rego of New Bedford in the special six-round semifinal. The Revere boy has yet to lose a bout since joining the pro ranks, but in the New Bedford youngster he will face a strong foe.

Henry Dooling of Beverly and Harold Fowler of Salem, North Shore heavyweights, will collide in another six-rounder. Kid Wilson of Gloucester meets Tony Sassa of East Boston in a scheduled six, as Georgie Lawless, now of Revere, boxes Arthur Nelson of Lynn in the opening six-round bout.

Diamond Dust

Old Wiley Moore, entirely recovered from the ankle injury which kept him on the sidelines during most of the last Western trip, will start on the mound for the Red Sox against the world's champion Athletics in Philadelphia this afternoon. Hank McDonald, one of the Mackian rookies, should oppose him.

Ed "Lefty" Brandt, Braves' mound ace, is again leading all National League pitchers in number of victories as a result of turning in No. 17 at the expense of the Phillies. Robins, by a score of 3 to 2, in the opener of the Sabbath doubleheader in Brooklyn.

A home run by Babe Herman with a mate on in the ninth robbed the Tribal southpaw of a shutout. He allowed only five hits, fanned five and gave but one pass. Dazzy Vance opposed him and while he fanned nine of the Tribesmen, he was found for 10 hits and his supporting cast committed three errors.

* * *

The Robbins gained an even break for the day when Hollis Thurston out-pitched Harry Seibold and Tom Zachary to win the nightcap, 4 to 3.

The split enabled the Braves to increase their lead to two full games over the sixth-place Pirates, who were twice beaten by the champion Cardinals.

The Cards now have an 11-game lead in the National League race as the best the Giants could do with the lowly Phils was split even, being blanked with one hit by Phil Collins in the second game after winning the opener.

The Senators maintained their slight lead over the third-place Yanks by beating the league-leading Athletics, 5 to 1, while the New Yorkers were trouncing the Sox.

Lou Gehrig's home run in the Sunday battle at the Wigwam was his 37th of the season, which puts him once more in a tie with Babe Ruth for the lead in the race. It was one of four hits made by Lou in six times up, while Ruth collected a pair of angles in four official trips to the platter.

Earl Webb is having a terrible time trying to emerge from his batting slump in the three Sox games at home, he was up 13 times and made only one safety, his 54th double of the season.

Terms Hack a "Bum" This Year

"I hope not."
He continued
"I have nothing against Wilson. He was a great ball player in 1930. This year he has been a 'bum'. He has been very foolish. You can't be a sport at nights and a ball player the next day. I sincerely hope he will reform—for some other club."

As for Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Cubs Wrigley said he hopes the rajah will be with the Cubs for some time.

The Cubs' magnate said no efforts were being made to secure Whitney.

Chuck Klein is a great ball player," he said. "He is young and a hard hitter. That is just the type we want. We will continue our efforts to get him. However, the new Philadelphia policy is to keep star ball players, but we will offer a big price for him. We don't need Whitney."

WRIGLEY IS DONE WITH WILSON

Chicago, Aug. 31 (INS)—Hack Wilson, who used to cut quite a figure in the home-run standing of the National League, will be missing from the Chicago Cubs' roster in 1932.

This was indicated today when William Wrigley, Jr., owner of the club was asked to confirm a report that Wilson would be one of three Chicago players traded to Philadelphia for Chuck Klein and Pinkie Whitney, the Cubs throwing in $150,000 cash.

Wrigley denied that negotiations for Klein had progressed to the point of discussing actual terms, but admitted the Cubs have been trying to secure the Phillie slugger since spring.

Asked point blank whether Wilson would be with the Cubs next year Wrigley said

All-Star Hurling Team Is Swamped

The 15 hurling players selected to oppose the New York team at Tech Field, Brookline, on Labor Day gave a good account of themselves yesterday at Smith Field, Brighton, where they defeated an all-star aggregation, 16 points to 1, in a test game.

In a Gaelic senior league football contest the Kerry 15 ran roughshod over the Norwood 15 to win 16 to 4 and continue in the running for the championship.

Golf Ball Imports in Sharp Decline

Washington, Aug. 31 (INS)—American golfers still import many golf balls, mostly from England although a sharp decline over previous years is shown in figures of the Department of Commerce.

During July 72,916 balls valued at $24,089 were imported. The high mark of foreign importations was over 2,500,000 golf balls in 1927. This fell to less than 2,000,000 in 1930.

THE DAILY DOZEN

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

Mickey Cochrane, the peppery Athletic catcher, has a nervous breakdown with the A's hovering some 15 games ahead of Washington. If Cochrane played with the Cincinnati Reds they'd be singing the funeral dirge now.

And, if you haven't noticed it, that breakdown was a most remarkable one. Mickey was rushed home by plane and was in the lineup a few days later. Wonderful what modern science will do. Now if they'll only find a rapid cure for dandruff or something.

Der Fatherland correspondent cables that in Berlin there is a college for jockeys. See here, now wasting all that scratch on cablegrams.

Why that's so old it could be used for sandwiches at the local restaurants. American colleges have been turning out jockeys for time immeasurable. The kind with the rah, rahs, raccoon coats and ballooned hip pockets.

A note from good old Buenos Aires informs the world that Argentina has awarded amnesty (look it up) to all its boxers as part of the first anniversary of the 1930 revolution celebration.

Now if those Gauchos will only award a nice, long stretcher and sufficient medical applications for V. Maria Campolo who fights Ernie Schaaf at Brooklyn's home for the aged (ballplayers) tonight.

Fordham University, believing that their strenuous schedule of a year ago forced them to drop their only game to St. Mary's, has decided to take "breathers" this season.

This, I dare say, is a most charitable movement. It will give the sports writers, telegraphers and linotypers a wonderful break, for it's a week's work to write a Fordham football story with those elongated names that exhaust the alphabet.

Connie Mack flatly denies that he has purchased Art Shires from Milwaukee for next season. Philadelphia, the Sleepy City, is a most austere and dignified hamlet, and it would be treason for Connie to add Arthur the Affable to the community.

Frank Lupton, captain of Auburn's first two football teams, way back when the girls first started wearing Empress Eugenie hats, says that the Carnegie Bulletin No. 23 is about 40 years late. He claims that in the nineties Dixie football teams were proselyting players.

Now those nasty Carnegie gloom-makers have something to think about. There's nothing new under the rain.

The owner of the Phillies is going to fire Manager Burt Shotton because every time he sticks his head out of the dugout the fans boo him. Evidently those owners have never been in Brooklyn where Wilbert Robinson figures that the party is vacant unless he steps from the dugout into a tidal wave of razzberries and, ofttimes, a shower of pop-bottles.

DAILY SHOTS FROM EVERYWHERE

All-America center takes bride. Tony Siano, former Fordham football star, was married yesterday to the former Miss Justine V. Veglia at Scotia, N. Y. Siano is a Waltham boy, and was generally rated as the best center in college ranks last fall.

Southern Exposure

By M. T. McSWEENEY

About half the Miami football team this year will be made up of ex-Greater Boston boys. When they come home for Christmas, we expect the family dinner conversations to run something like this:

The father: "Well, son, how was the football season?"

The son: "We-all suttin'ly had a prime year, suh!"

The father: "Win all your games, son?"

The son: "All 'cept one lil one with that Yankee team up no'th, suh."

The father: What was the score?"

The son: "Fo'ty fahve to eleven, suh."

The father: Forty-five to eleven! Say, they took you like Grant took Richmond, didn't they?"

The son (icily): "Suh?"

Fan mah brow!

Police Halt Riot at Coast Game

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 31 (INS)—Players of the Los Angeles team in the Pacific Coast League were on their way home today after police reserves and firemen had to be called out to stop a riot at the Seattle ball park when fans objected to stalling tactics of the Angels. The team evaded the irate fans by speeding to a waiting train in taxicabs.

Fred Haney, third baseman, received the only injury among the players, a painful bruise on the arm, when he warded off a blow from a crutch swung by a fan.

What the Stars Did

By the Associated Press

Goose Goslin, Browns—Made six hits including homer and two doubles to lead in two victories over Indians.

Ed Brandt, Braves, and Lefty O'Doul, Robins—Former held Robins to five hits to win opener, 2-2; latter hit five times in eight tries to help gain even break for day.

Luke Appling, White Sox—Hit two doubles and single and drove in winning run in 12 inning victory over Tigers.

Phil Collins, Phillies, and Carl Hubbell, Giants—Collins held Giants to one hit to win second game, 2-0, after Hubbell had checked Phillies to take first, 3-2.

Ben Chapman, Yankees—Hit two homers, batting in five runs against Red Sox.

Paul Derringer and Bill Hallahan, Cardinals—Pitched Cards to victories over Pirates in both games of doubleheader.

Cliff Heathcote, Reds—Hit pinch double in eighth to give Reds lead in 4-3 triumph over Cubs.

Al Crowder, Senators—Outpitched E. Rommel to beat Athletics.

SHIELDS AND WOOD PLAY CHAMPS

Men and women champions joined hands on the tennis courts at Longwood today to battle for National honors.

Featured by the semi-final and final rounds of the National mixed doubles championship play has resumed today after rain and the muddy condition of the courts had forced extension of the matches over the week end.

The [illegible] combination of Betty Nuthall, of England, and George M. Lott of Philadelphia has already reached the final stage and will play the winner of the semi-final round between Mrs. L. A. Harper of Santa Barbara, Cal. and Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Texas and Mrs. Elsie Goldack Pitman and Keith Gledhill, of California. Miss Nuthall and Lott won the championship two years ago and were favorites to repeat.

Wood-Shields Team Leading

A decision in the unfinished quarter-final match in the national men's doubles, hanging fire since Friday, between Lott and John H. Doeg of Newark, N. J., defending champions, and Frank X. Shields and Sidney B. Wood, Jr., of New York will be sought today. The winner will play Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., and Berkeley Bell of New York in the semi-final stage.

When rain forced postponement of the quarter-final match, the two teams had split the first two sets, and the Wood-Shields combination was leading in the third set with a score of 14–16, 6–2, 4–3. The losing team today will be hustled off to Philadelphia, where they will play in the international matches against England and France tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday.

The other semi-final match will bring the Southern combination, Clifford Sutter of New Orleans and Bruce Barnes of Austin, Tex., against Wilmer Allison, also of Austin, and John A. Van Ryn of Philadelphia.

Two tournaments had already been decided today.

A new championship team was crowned in the national veterans doubles, when Dr. William Rosenbaum and Fred C. Baggs of New York defeated the former champions, S. Jarvis Adams and H. H. Basford, New York, 4–6, 6–4, 6–4.

Miss Helen Jacobs of California paired with Miss Phyllis Mudford of the English Wightman Cup team, defeated the All-British combination, Miss Betty Nuthall and Mrs. Dorothy Shepherd Barron, in the final round of the women's invitation doubles, 6–4, 6–2.

Dorchen Defeats Nipper at Quincy

More than 60 yachts sailed in the open races of the Quincy Yacht Club.

In the Class I boats the Dorchen II defeated the Nipper. The latter boat withdrew, hopelessly beaten.

Coming of September Marks New Season

Veterans Hold Listeners' Favor

By N. E. T.

There is a big "31" on the wall calendar that invariably brings to mind two German dialect comics of the stage who have recently found new life and popularity on [illegible]. Meaning your old friends, Weber and Fields.

One of their most humorous narratives way back there was about a Teuton brewer on the verge of bankruptcy. August Schaeffer they called him. When asked why he was so panic-stricken late one summer, he opined "Vell, cheest don't fergit [illegible] of September [illegible] der last of August."

RADIO TO THE RESCUE

Who else is there that might have [illegible] years forever [illegible] the advent of radio? Well, Francis X. Bushman for one.

Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson are two more given an extended [illegible] of broadcasting. Frank and Julia don't [illegible] having been quite frugal and wise in their prime.

Speaking of veterans, Graham McNamee and Norman Brokenshire find themselves still enjoying a place in the radio sun though they have had [illegible] mightily to retain glory earned during their early days.

ANSWER YES OR NO

What accounts for the lasting popularity of Amos 'n' Andy? Why does Phil Cook hang on? . . . How is it none of the [illegible] voices manage to [illegible] as does that of Alwyn Bach and [illegible] . . . What city in [illegible] beginning with B and ending with N sends more people up the radio ladder than any other center of population in the U. S.? . . . Why doesn't Grantland Rice interview Jack Dempsey [illegible] champ's colorful career? . . . Who thinks Morton Downey would go over as big without Tony Wons? . . . What local orchestra is listed on the waves today at 4:30 as the Bostonians and again at 5:15 as the Danceonians? . . . Who can look Charley (WNAC) [illegible] straight in the necktie without [illegible] . . . What radio [illegible], very strong, [illegible] another daily [illegible] newspaper? . . . Who [illegible] Where is the wisdom [illegible] orchestra leaders and [illegible] who so obviously ape the [illegible]? . . . What [illegible] will see his life dream [illegible] of Paddy [illegible] New York? . . . Why [illegible] send Ted Husing [illegible] the one [illegible]? . . . Which big desk job with NBC is Red [illegible] for?

Only [illegible] published an item concerning George Warren, formerly an operator on the WAAB control boards. He was [illegible] the talking picture sound [illegible] of California. Today comes his regards on a card showing a radio antenna in Arizona.

CAN THIS BE TRUE?

Dame Rumor [illegible] not be quiet and insists there will be new stations added to The Yankee Network most any day. The New England [illegible] seems determined to achieve blanket coverage hereabouts.

All [illegible] over Saturday afternoon [illegible] definite that those races at Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H. will be broadcast Labor Day. Gerald Harrison will officiate at the microphone to describe the thrilling motor speed contests, beginning at 3 p. m. and lasting until 5 o'clock.

A [illegible] and A [illegible] with their string instruments will be signed commercially soon. These two local lads harmonized their way into lots of ears and hearts on Friday. Arthur (WEEI) Edes gave them the chance they've been persistently dogging him for.

ALFRED W. ESTEN

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Reductions of one full day of the running time between Boston and Pacific Coast ports is promised by the Luckenbach Steamship Co, Inc., who send out advices that their steamers hereafter will sail from Boston on Wednesday instead of Tuesday as heretofore.

Cargo should be delivered at Commonwealth Pier No. 5 every Thursday before 3 o'clock, for clearance Wednesday. Cargo will be taken at Mystic Pier No 48 up until 3 o'clock on the Wednesday schedule sailing date.

Although steamers will sail one day later from Boston ports this will in no way affect arrivals at Pacific Coast ports.

REPAIRS MADE

Repairs will be made on the Boston owned four masted schooner Lucia P Dow, one of the Crowell & Thurlow fleet, which listed over with the ebbing tide, while being recaulked on the graving beach at Parrsboro, N. S. She rolled 40 feet of her keel over, broke the lower part of her stern post and sustained other damage.

RADIO MESSAGE—A radio from the German steamship Heddersheim stated that she will arrive late today. She comes from Scandanavian ports. She will discharge a large cargo at Piers 46 and 47 Mystic Terminal docks in Charlestown.

DAY AHEAD—The steamer Binnendyk is likely to arrive here sometime today, making the trip from Batavia and other ports about a day ahead of schedule. Saturday radio advices indicated that she would not make this port until Tuesday. She will discharge cargo at the Army Base.

PULPWOOD CARGO—With a full cargo of pulpwood, the Norwegian motorship Fernhill from Leningrad is in port discharging at the Wiggin terminal. Capt. H. Torp stated that he had an uneventful trip.

LARGE LIST—With a list of 688 passengers, the steamer Yarmouth of the Eastern Steamship Lines was one of the week-end arrivals. This is one of the largest lists carried by the Yarmouth this year. She came here from Yarmouth, N. S., docking at Central Wharf.

SPEEDY TRIP — Two days ahead of her scheduled time the German steamship Olga Seimers arrived here from Bremen, Germany, with a full cargo of fertilizer. She was not looked for here until Tuesday. She left Bremen Aug. 13. Part of her cargo will be discharged at the Mystic Terminals, the remainder at North Weymouth.

TWO LINERS—Two transatlantic liners taking Bostonians out on a European vacation and bringing Bostonians on return to this port kept the port lively, yesterday. The White Star Liner Brittanic went out from Commonwealth Pier for Liverpool and Queenstown. The Cunard Liner Scythia came into the Cunard docks from Liverpool and Queenstown.

HIGH SPOTS IN A LOW LIFE

The Yale Bowl in 1922 after the Yale-Army game; watching a cadet in the rear rank of the cadet corps steal a farewell kiss from his sweetheart without once losing step as the corps swung out of the Bowl and while some 25,000 delighted spectators cheered lustily for the cause of romance . . . As a reporter on The Courant, starting a tempest in a teapot by reporting that Florence Trumbull had attended a play in Hartford with her husband-to-be, John Coolidge . . . It seems it wasn't John at all . . . it was two other fellows . . . The Shubert Theater in New Haven one night several years ago when a group of "playful" Yale boys set out to break up the performance of a play . . . Sisters . . . with their hoots and catcalls . . . Their "innocent fun" was quickly interrupted when Roberta Arnold, the star of the piece, stepped down to the footlights and gave them as artistic a lacing as any litter of pups has ever been treated to . . . They spent the remainder of the evening filing backstage to Miss Arnold's dressing room, singly and in twos and threes, to offer their apologies.

THINGS WE LIKED

Here are some of the things that have tickled our fancy over the week-end: Guy Fawkes (Bob Benchley to you!) in "The Wayward Press" in the current N. Yker . . . Ted Roy and his Cascades Roof Orchestra playing "Not That I Care" from "Free for All" . . . "Trouble in the Balkans," an hilarious personally conducted tour of Europe by W. O (N. Y. Herald-Trib.) McGeehan . . . The tongue-in-cheek slyness of the rewrite man who reported, a few mornings ago, that Jack Rodman had been put on the spot in "the exclusive Audubon rd. section" . . . Bessie Love at the Keith - Boston and Glen Dale singing in the stage show at the Met.

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

Charlie (Shubert) Van and Mr. and Mrs. Paul (Clark &) McCullough of Brookline have just returned from a junket through Canada . . . Jack Batchelder, Jr., Back Bay artist and musician, has written a new waltz for Maurice and Cordoba of the Cascades Roof . . . Fred ("Three's a Crowd") Allen comes to Boston this week for a three weeks' vacation before he goes on tour with his show . . . Alyce Siemans is collecting items for "Zits," too . . . Joe (Hotel Bradford) McCarthy will switch over to the Westminster as assistant manager soon . . . At one of the swank church fairs on the North Shore recently, a child of perhaps nine summers was urging her companion to buy "Bad Girl" at the book stall, saying that she'd put the cover of her book (probably one of the Elsie stories) on it so the other's mother wouldn't know . . . In their first edition Sunday, the Post turned back the hands of time an announced that Mayor Curley would oppose Ely for the gubernatorial nomination in 1832 . . . One of our regular correspondents is puzzled . . . She wants to know "why all the platinum poles along upper Boylston st.?" . . . We've assigned one of our most competent operatives to the case . . . If you're real good, boys and girls, you may see Bordoni at the opening of Seaglades . . . And Mickey Alpert and his admirals will be smartly attired in natty naval uniforms, too . . . Emile Coulon, Jr., is going to sneak away for a short vacation at Oak Bluffs before his new Seaglades room opens.

STATE ST. Hears:

That the market continues to act as though it had begun to outline a bottom. Whether this is to be a long time low or just the base for a seasonal rally remains to be seen. However, its performance is sufficiently good to warrant the careful accumulation of shares on setbacks from here on. Always protected, of course, by stop loss orders.

Good Showing

Too much stress cannot be laid on the excellent behavior of the various stock markets during the acute period through which England has seemingly passed. Back in May when the German crisis was imminent, share prices broke badly. But when the premier creditor nation was suddenly forced to seek help they stood up admirably and hinted that the world has turned toward better days.

As indicated here last week, the bond market had worked itself into an oversold condition which clearly called for a rally that has now lasted for four sessions. Forward progress has been fairly rapid and gains will probably undergo a period of consolidation that should not be disheartening.

South America

Those who recognize the bond market as a medium for speculative efforts during a period such as this are inclined to advise the purchase of leading South American obligations. Especially is this true regarding Brazil and Argentina. In both of these countries there appears to be a determined effort by banking leaders to place their financial houses in order.

Auburn Automobile has been rather buoyant in recent sessions. Traders who are accustomed to assuming the risks entailed when following this equity are long on the theory it may be used to lead an attempt at a fall motor market.

Boardroom Briefs

American Can is said to have closed a contract for 1,000,000 vacuum coffee tins a month. . . The coppers are acting better but the stock on hand figure still scares prospective buyers . . Bear markets usually end with dull trading and a 2,000,000-share day has not been seen since July 15 . . . Big Steel is expected to better its earnings for the second quarter in the current period.

RECORD RAYON TRADE SEEN

There is every indication that the full business in rayon will be at one of the highest levels in the history of the industry, it is stated in the current issue of the Textile Organon, published monthly by the Tubize Chatillon Corporation.

Consumers are appreciating the probability of a shortage in certain specialty of a shortage in certain commitments are being made at this time to cover fall delivery. Textile Organon says it is probable that this practice will be intensified as the season develops.

DRUG PROFITS SET NEW HIGH RECORDS

By FRANK H. MELOON

One of the outstanding bright spots in the business and financial picture today is Drug, Inc. It made more money last year than in any other 12 months in its history. This year Drug Inc. is doing even better.

Three reasons for the remarkable showing of the world's leading drug enterprise are advanced by George M. Gales, who is vice-president of the Drug, Inc., board and president of Louis K. Liggett Co., the drug store chain.

REASONS FOR SUCCESS

These three reasons are:

1. A well rounded organization, combining manufacturing and distribution.
2. Manufacture and sale of medicinal essentials at a moderate price.
3. Advertising.

The drug business is one which practically everyone must patronize at one time or another, and which most people patronize regularly. It is considered a good index to the public's buying power. Drug, Inc. results show that this buying power has not suffered as the "indigo pessimists" try to have us believe.

Mr. Gales, with his fingers figuratively on the pulse of the nation, finds there has been a pleasing change for the better in the past few weeks in a number of section of the country.

In line with other authorities, and testifying to the accuracy of the "Drug, Inc. index," Mr. Gales reports the New England section has shown the greatest comparative stability for months past, and that new improvement is noted in our area. Pickups in the South and also in New York territory are also noted by him.

GENERAL RECOVERY

The Middle West, mighty farming area, continues to show poor results, doubtless due to the decrease in buying power caused by the slump in agricultural prices. Mr. Gales does not attempt to say that the improvements reported indicate the "big turn" but he believes that, when this comes, it will be general, not merely sectional.

"It takes a long time fully to restore confidence," declares Mr. Gales sagely, "but only a short time to shake it, which explains the suddenness and depth of a depression. But business will come back. Americans are pretty good sports.

"They say on the other side that Americans rise higher and fall farther than any other people."

What impressed Mr. Gales most, on a tour of the Middle West recently was that there was less talk there about "bad times" than in New York. He found the people generally buckling down to hard work to restore prosperity.

WHAT AILS US?

What is it that ails us? Mr. Gales says.

"My humble opinion—I am no economist—is that most of our troubles are due to overcrowding our industries. In the inflation of 1928 and 1929 all kinds of companies were organized and merged and their stocks sold to the public."

Here Mr. Gales finds Great Britain better off than the United States. As American director for Drug, Inc.'s, English subsidiary, he spends a part of his time every year overseas. He finds England did not have any of the "inflation debauch" suffered here in the two years mentioned.

Drug, Inc., is mapping out wider campaigns. No curtailment is planned. Of the company's profits 80 per cent comes from manufacturing, but success is partly attributed to effective store distribution and introduction of new products.

There are more than 700 directly owned Liggett stores and 11,000 affiliated but independently owned Rexall stores. The 900 Boot's Drug Stores in Great Britain are controlled by Drug, Inc. Canada has 38 Liggett stores.

WELL KNOWN MEDICINES

Among the better known proprietary medicines and toilet articles made by Drug and its subsidiaries are:

Bayer Aspirin, California Syrup of Figs, Cascarets, Dodson's Livertone, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, Fletcher's Castoria, Gastrogen Tablets, Midol, Pape's Cold Compound, Pape's Diapepsin, Phillipps' Milk of Magnesia, Sal Hepatica, Vegex (Vitamin B Food), Vicks Nose and Throat Drops, Vicks Vapo-Rub, Analka, Danderine, Ingram's Milkweed Cream, Ingram's Shaving Cream, Ipana Toothpaste, Mum, Phillips' Dental Magnesia (toothpaste), and Vitalis. It also owns Three-in-One Oil.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Closing strength on a Saturday only to sell off in early Monday trading has been a common stock market performance this year. Ability of oil and motion picture shares to hold steady during the rather brief early selling period today was regarded by many observers as significant.

Amusement Shares Are Picking Up

Amusement shares have been picking up partly because the season is at hand when they can be depended on to show better earnings. If they follow the trend displayed in past seasons. Then, too, they have been pretty thoroughly liquidated by tired holders. Loew's is being widely boosted as prospective leader.

Oils Consolidate Higher Positions

Oil shares are regarded today as consolidating their higher market positions, achieved largely through the constructive shutdown action of the governors of Texas and Oklahoma. At the same time those interested in them are marking time, awaiting some further evidences of the actual results of the stopping of production. In this group Standard Oil of New Jersey is still meeting with the most favor.

Texas Oil Output Shows a Big Drop

In the week ended August 29 crude oil storage in East Texas district declined to a little less than 2,000,000 barrels, according to reports to Railroad Commission. Pipe line movement totaled 1,721,214 barrels, against 3,301,627 the previous week. Shipment by tank car totaled 147,532 barrels, against 1,576,606, a decline of 1,429,074. Crude oil runs to local refineries aggregated 268,982 barrels, against 286,965, a decline of 17,983.

Seeks Russian Gas to Fill Orders

Some of the oil men do not take kindly to the military shutdown. President Champlin of the Champlin Refining Co. at Enid, Okla., says he is preparing to buy Russian gasoline to fill orders. He says crude oil isn't worth the $1 a barrel which is the gubernatorial objective.

Earnings for First Half of Year Rise

For the first half of 1931 Standard Brands' net income was equal to 63 cents a common share, compared with 57 cents in the same period of 1930, an increase of 9.9 per cent. In 1930 the company felt the effects of heavier expenses and general business, but results were equal to $1.22 a share, against $1.37 in 1929. Standard's financial position is unusually strong. At the end of last year cash amounted to $15,051,000, while government, municipal and other bonds totalled $10,410,700, compared with total current liabilities of only $4,693,000.

Bond Mart Watched To "Confirm" Stocks

The bond market may now be ready to "confirm" stocks in holding steady under fairly heavy selling pressure, or in responding with higher prices to the final wind-up of the liquidation by savings banks, insurance companies, etc. The bond market can move up smartly when conditions are right and such movements have frequently pointed the way to all-around improvement in industry and business.

"Rally After Labor Day" Is Slogan

The bulls are all talking about the good market to come. Their chorus now is:

"We'll have a good rally after Labor Day."

Stock market movements advertised in advance used to fall through, pretty nearly always. But in recent months numerous "advertised rallies" have made good, even if only for "jiggle" periods.

Different Factors Faced By Market

J. P. Maher, former financial editor of the New York American, tells us today:

"Conditions differ from last year in that the usual pre-fall rally of August has not been experienced. The shock administered to business sentiment when the market fell from unwarranted levels in September, 1930, is not faced now and in addition business news should get no worse. In fact, it can get a little better in the next several weeks."

Int. Telephone in Position to Gain

The Street hears there has been scale buying in International Telephone on reactions in the past few days by interests who contend that changes for the better in European conditions will be of material benefit to the company. The uncertain situation in various foreign countries affected the business of the company in the past, but an improvement would be noted almost immediately in better gross and net results for the company.

Standard Brands Good Prospect

It is noted there is a growing tendency to give more study to the affairs of Standard Brands. In fact, that stock has been mentioned by at least one firm as attractive for a switch from other issues on which the outlook is uncertain. The company did extensive advertising of several products in the past which increased expenses, but it is now believed the benefits from this campaign in increased earnings will be shown in the near future.

BOSTON STOCK PRICES ARE LOWERED

Stock prices were mostly lower in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange. Changes, for the most part, were limited to a narrow range. In about three-quarters of an hour only one purely Boston issue was traded, the issue being East Boston Land and selling at $2 a share.

Boston Personal Property was a point higher and Boston & Albany selling ex-dividend was fractionally higher. Gillette and New England Telephone each recorded fractional gains.

Atchison lowered 1½ and American Telephone was down 1⅝. Pennsylvania lowered around a point. Warren Bros. was down ⅞. Boston Elevated eased a minor fraction. General Capital was down ½. Edison and United Shoe were unchanged from previous closing levels.

Incoming new business of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. thus far in August shows a decrease compared with July. Sales in August hence will not attain a volume comparable with that in the preceding month. It is probable, however, that August will disclose a profit, although not measuring up to that for July.

Realization of a profit in July, when sales were below June, it should be pointed out, is due in large measure to savings effected in administrative expenses.

SPECTATOR Says:

Despite the downward tendency in railroad stocks and bonds, it may now be said that August ran true to form in reaching for slightly higher prices in the Stock Market. With one day yet to calculate, the general average of the 90 stocks in Standard Statistics Company's list showed a rise of 2.1 points since August first, even though handicapped by a decline of 4.6 points in the rails. The industrials gained 3 points, and the utilities 4⅓ points in the period under review.

Big Handicap

Conditions in the bond market were somewhat the reverse. Here again the railroad bond group was the biggest handicap, the average price of 10 "statistical" rail bonds falling off nearly 5 points since Aug. 1. The industrials lost 1⅛ points, the utilities a little less and the composite results were recorded in a drop of 2.4 points.

Representative high-grade industrial bonds are now selling 7 points under the best average price of the year to date, while the rails are down 12 points and the utilities only two points under the 1931 high.

Indifference Shown

The indifference of the stock market to unfavorable news, and its readiness to respond to constructive matters in home and foreign finance were widely commented upon at the week-end. It was suggested that the market may be a "few laps ahead" of industry and trade, leading the way to what every business and industrial head desires most—recovery from depression.

Since July first, according to Dow Jones Company, there have been declared 645 unchanged and 17 increased corporation dividends, against 58 decreased dividends and 60 omissions.

Commodities

Indecisive fluctuations in commodity prices are interpreted as a broad period of stabilization, from which a moderate upward movement should ensue. The metals are holding quite firmly, crude oil and gasoline advancing, cotton and rubber weak, and pig iron and finished steel firm.

Many industries are handicapped by huge storage supplies of raw and manufactured goods which must be turned into the channels of consumption before prices can substantially advance.

N. E. UTILITY'S EARNINGS UP

Gross earnings of subsidiaries of the New England Public Service Company for the three months ended June 30, 1931, aggregate $5,654,640, as compared with $5,517,663 for the second quarter of 1930. After deducting operating expenses, taxes and other charges, the net income available for retirement and dividends on stocks of the New England Public Service Company was $1,233,023, as against $1,160,425 in 1930.

For 12 months ended June 30, 1931, the subsidiaries' gross earnings totaled $23,515,906, compared with $22,713,708. Net for retirement and stocks after operating expenses, taxes and other charges, aggregated $5,443,959, as against $4,836,953.

SMALL LOSSES ARE RECORDED IN WALL ST.

New York, Aug. 31—Some moderate setbacks were recorded in today's Wall St. dealings.

Announcement of $1,100,000,000 in financing for the United States Treasury focused Wall Street's attention upon the mounting treasury deficit today, and helped to impart a heavy tone to the stock market.

The extremely favorable terms of the treasury financing, however, had a bolstering effect upon the bond market, where U. S. Government issues and rail liens improved.

BRAZILIANS SOLD

Some selling came into the foreign issues, however, Brazilians breaking sharply on announcement of suspension of sinking fund payments.

Unsettling to the share market was an early drop of 2 points in American Can and a slump of 2 in Alaska Juneau. The latter, a low-priced gold mining stock, has been a pool favorite in recent months. The dumping of a few large blocks on the market today was attributed in some quarters to profit taking by Chicago interests.

American Telephone lost more than 2, and miscellaneous issues sagging a point or more included U. S. Steel, General Electric, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Safeway, Montgomery Ward, Bethlehem, Consolidated Gas, North American, New York Central, Southern Pacific and others.

The market tried to rally at times during the morning but sagged off after midday. It was very dull.

TREASURY'S FINANCING

It was pointed out in speculative quarters that the large treasury financing was susceptible to either bullish or bearish interpretation. The offering of $800,000,000 in long term bonds at 3 per cent might indicate a belief in treasury circles that a substantial pickup in commercial activity is likely to appear before the next quarterly tax date, so that much favorable terms might not then be available.

This possibility had little effect upon sentiment, however, since it had been brought up three months ago, when a similar offering of bonds was made at 3⅛ per cent.

Although it is understood that the administration is averse to any increase in taxation during depressed times, the deficit of some $900,000,000 in the fiscal year that ended June 30, and the prospect of an even larged deficit this year is regarded in Wall Street as foreshadowing an eventual period of reckoning.

Bankers acknowledge, however, that, with our enormous credit resources, large treasury deficits are minor matters as contrasted to their threatening import in Great Britain, unpalatable as they may be.

Better tone in bonds, particularly the railroad obligations, has inspired considerable gossip over the possibility that organized support may have bee narranged. There is no confirmation of this in prominent banking circles, however, where the theory is offered that the market had merely become technically oversold.

With railroad earnings for July comparing less favorably with last year than those of June, and freight car loadings reports unfavorable, little basis for the movement can be found. Early estimates of the weekly freight car loadings figures to be announced Wednesday, however, indicate some improvement.

BOND MARKET TREND HIGHER

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—The bond market started the new week today with a more hopeful tone. The price trend was generally higher. Rising prices in railroad issues and moderate gains in United States government obligations caused the change in sentiment.

Treasury and Liberty loans were dull much of the time, but good gains were scored by the Treasury 3⅜s of 1943-47 and of 1940-43 and the new 3¼s of 1946-49.

The reaction of traders to the offering of $800,000,000 of 3 per cent bonds, the lowest rate since before the great war, was favorable. Several outstanding government issues yield approximately the same rate.

Railroad loans continued to gain, but nothing tangible developed to explain their strength.

New Lumber Orders Exceed Production

New York, Aug. 31—Orders received by lumber mills during the week ended August 22 were approximately 13 per cent above production, reports from 824 leading hardwood and softwood mills to the National Lumber Association indicate.

Allegheny Steel's Activities Rise

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—Six more melting furnaces at the Brackenridge, Pa., plant of the Allegheny Steel Co. are to be placed in operation this week. Only two have been in operation for the last several months.

NEW YORK CENTRAL

F. F. C., Marlboro st.—May I have the benefit of your opinion regarding New York Central?

Ans.—Unless a decision is handed down on the rate increase application by the time the New York Central directors next meet for dividend action, the board undoubtedly will be motivated in its decision solely by the income statement. And, unless the rate decision is rushed beyond current expectations, it will not be available to the Central directors in time to weigh their dividend opinions.

This is the background of the market's nervousness over the Central payment, now $6. The yield of 8½ per cent very plainly intimates the market's expectations of a lower rate. There is a great difference of opinion, however, whether the payment will be lowered to $5 or to $4 annual basis.

A $5 payment probably has been discounted at current price of the stock, at least for the present, while a $4 rate would be viewed unsatisfactorily by the market, although the yield would still be, at current price, over 5.7 per cent.

The one hope of Central, in common with other rail systems and in absence of any business revival, is the rate increase or the unpleasant alternative or wage reduction. Either one would effect a material change for the better, the Street believes.

BORG-WARNER

C. L., Boston—Borg-Warner has been suggested to me as a good purchase. What do you think of it?

Ans.—From July, 1928, Borg-Warner paid $4 a share annually, reduced to $3 July 1, 1930, and again to current $1 basis January 2, 1931. Net for 1930 was $1.66 a share against $6.03 in 1929. In the first half of this year earnings of 77 cents a share contrasted with $1.82 in similar period of 1930.

OMITS DIVIDEND

O. J., Cambridge—What is your opinion of a purchase of Skelly Oil preferred?

Ans—Quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on Skelly Oil preferred, maintained from April, 1930, expected August 1, was omitted because of unsatisfactory operations, which in the first half of current year resulted in a deficit of $2,702,000, contrasted with net income of $1,283,000 in corresponding period of 1930. In 1930 earnings applicable to the preferred were $16 a share. Without dividends a stock is not rated investment.

PAYS LESS

S. J., Dorchester—Is Transamerica bought at higher levels worth holding?

Ans.—Despite official assurance that if earnings proved insufficient a part of the large surplus could be used, to a reasonable extent, to maintain the $1 dividend, Transamerica was put on a 40-cents-a-share annual basis July 25. Earnings of 79 cents a share in 1930 did not justify the larger rate. You must decide whether to hold or to sell at a loss.

IRREGULAR RATE

S. W., Boston—What do you think of Bethlehem Steel common? I could buy 20 shares at current levels.

Ans.—Bethlehem Steel common is a speculation. August 15 the stock was put on a $4 annual basis, contrasted with the $6 rate paid from November, 1929. Six months earnings were only $3.38 on the preferred with nothing for the common. Net for 1930 was $5.26 a share on the common against $11.01 in 1929. The place for the amount at your disposal is in the savings bank.

PARAMOUNT-PUBLIX

A. M., Somerville—What are the latest earnings for Paramount-Publix? I have 25 shares.

Ans.—In the first six months of 1931 Paramount-Publix earned $1.82 a share, compared with $2.98 in similar period of 1930. Net for 1930 was $6.15 a share. On June 27 a dividend of 62½ cents in cash was paid, contrasted with the recent $1 rate paid from March, 1930, but the September 30 payment will be 2½ per cent in stock instead of cash. Current outlook is considered good.

TWO PREFERRED STOCKS

J. E., Arlington—I have $3900 and want to invest about $2000 in sound stocks. Please give suggestions.

Ans.—For a bit less than $2100 you could get 10 shares each J. I. Case preferred and Bangor & Aroostook preferred. The annual income of $140 is 6⅔ per cent. Dividends on these stocks have been well protected by earnings. The amount you will have left in the savings bank should be adequate for emergencies.

HOPES FOR RECOVERY

T. L., Newton—I have 50 shares American Commercial Alcohol at higher levels. Is there any hope that a recovery will set in?

Ans.—You know as much about future market prices as anybody. From July, 1929, American Commercial alcohol paid 40 cents a share quarterly, but payment expected July 15, 1930, was omitted. Operations for 1930 resulted in a deficit of $478,000 compared with net of $1,395,761 in 1929. In the first half of current year a deficit of $42,942 compared with net income of $175,931 in first half of 1930.

Wage Uncertainties Causing Hesitancy, Says Forbes

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Aug. 31—Two of the most influential men of affairs in America tell me: "Things here have not yet improved one bit." There is an underlying feeling of hesitancy which, I gather, is based on apprehension that stability will not return until the wage readjustment movement now under way has run its course.

B. C. Forbes

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor declares emphatically that nothing on earth will cause him to modify his out-and-out opposition to wage reductions, regardless of what may happen to commodity prices, volume of employment or anything else. The stern fact remains, however, that far more downward revision of wages and salaries have been made and are being quietly made than generally learned.

* * *

There is no longer unanimity among wage earners themselves as to what would be most helpful in the way of hastening the stimulation of industry and business activity. Here is one letter, just received from T. W. McGilton, Aberdeen, Wash.:

"From a common laborer's viewpoint, in order for prosperity to return, I would suggest that all business, big and little, employ labor at what each business will stand and gradually increase the wages as fast as prosperity returns, so we may have something to do and be able to live. I have been out of work eight months."

Another reader, who asks that his name be withheld, writes in part:

"You financial wizards that assume to know it all, will you ever learn that you cannot defy and annul the natural law of supply and demand? Attempts have been made to peg or maintain an artificial price for rubber, sugar, wheat, copper and many other commodities—and with what result?

"Now you are trying to maintain an artificial price for labor, and in doing so you are obstructing the return of prosperity. I am a skilled mechanic, able and anxious to work, a college graduate with a degree. I would be glad to work for $3 a day rather than suffer privation for the necessities of life or maybe eventually have to apply to some charity for aid. Why should you try to maintain an artificial wage scale against the wishes of those who are in need and begging for work? I express the sentiment of 99 per cent. of the unemployed today."

* * *

Without seeking here to inject any views of my own, I cannot do other than report what the actual situation is, so far as I can learn through diligent investigation. Whereas there was almost general intention originally to maintain boom-time wages and to keep on as near normally as possible, an increasing number of employers have become discouraged about their ability to carry on much longer without further reducing their costs, including labor costs.

Read this statement in Saturday's New York Times:

"Installation of freight cars in the first seven months of 1931 numbered 8264, against 55,660 in the same period last year. The railroads placed numerous orders last year in an effort to keep the wheels of commerce turning, but steady and drastic declines in traffic made continuance of this policy impossible."

* * *

Every sensible person naturally favors the paying of the highest wages feasible, the highest wages compatible with the best interests of the country, or prosperity of the wage earners, of employment. Few actions could be more despicable than needless reducing of wage rates.

The question now seriously worrying many employers is how best to distribute the total weekly sum available for wages. Some agree with Mr. Green that it is wisest to maintain the 1929 wage rates and cut down the number employed. Others now doubt whether it might not be better to change the 1929 rates so as to give work to more men and, through reducing prices, encourage resumption of buying.

That's how the situation stands at the moment.

* * *

Foreign events were interpreted in the highest financial circles as reassuring last week. Inducing France to extend $200,000,000 credit to Britain, the same amount as taken by American bankers, is hailed as extremely gratifying. It signifies that France has finally been impelled to take a broader view of her responsibility towards the rest of Europe. Germany's troubles, too, have been temporarily overcome.

* * *

Whether the recent relative steadiness in stocks and commodities foreshadows an early revival or will prove less significant cannot be foretold. It is at least some consolation that the general decline has been to some extent arrested.

CURB MARKET IS EASIER

New York, Aug. 31—The curb market drifted through an idle session today. Pace prices displayed an easy tone, although in most of the favorites recessions amounted only to small fractions.

Brazilian traction dipped about a point in sympathy with other securities having their origin in that country. Domestic utility shares dragged dully with the exception of North American Light & Power which made a new low.

A. O. Smith added a few points to its recent gains. New Jersey Zinc firmed, but other metal stocks were dull.

Interest in the oil group was nominal, with quotations displaying a slightly lower trend in a light volume of trading. Another large reduction in crude output is anticipated this week and higher prices are expected.

Curb's listing committee suspended trading in the common and preference stocks of Bahia Corp., but gave no reason for its action.

Associated Gas Has 3 P. C. Gross Gain

Gross earnings and other income of Associated Gas & Electric System for the twelve months ended July 31, 1931, amounted to $111,639,107. This was $3,588,203, or 3 per cent more than the earnings reported for the twelve months ended July 31, 1930.

"Play golf on a battlefield," says an ad of the Vicksburg, Miss., Chamber of Commerce.

Or take the wife around anywhere and play battlefield on a golf course.

* * *

At that, the idea of using a battlefield for a golf course is not so bad. It gives a lot of mugs a chance to think they made a hole-in-one.

* * *

The Vicksburg battlefield course must seem almost perfect to golfers who played most of their lives on municipal courses.

BETTER LUCK NEXT TIME, GERALD

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

The croquet game on North Denton st., was brought to an abrupt stop Wednesday night when Gerald Sechrist, one of the players, got a bug in his ear. It just about set Gerald wild for a while. Emergency treatment stopped the pain and killed the bug, but Doc Spell had to be called.

* * *

Be that as it may, the main political problem in getting out the vote of the voters who haven't got sense enough to vote.

TODAY'S BULL-ETIN

(Newspaper Movie Column)

"Advertising of pictures today, although dynamic and colorful, is a truer guide to what the patron may actually expect of the subject than it ever has been. When the phraseology of the exploitation agent sounds bombastic and resorts to superlatives it is because he himself is sold on the thing he has to offer."

Adam Scoffiaw's Djournal

This evening Rosie-Posie, our serving doxie, did sit her down and sing me an hundred blues songs through her nose, nightie prettie, and the one I like best is where she cry out—

"Come all you rounders if you wanta flirt,
There come a lady in a hobble skirt . . ."

. . .causing me to leap from chair, and clap of handes and stamp of footie, so charged am I with furies and demons.

Notes and Gossip About People You Know

RESIGNS TO WED
Two of the most popular young persons in the employ of the city were married today in Mission Church, Roxbury. They are "Joe" Fellows of the school committee and Miss Alice McCusker, who resigned from the supply department on Saturday.

EX-CHAMP
"Tom" O'Leary of the Central office, city public works department, is no longer golf champion of City Hall. "Tom" and Atty. Arthur Hill went down to defeat before "Gene" Canney and "Dan" Lynch of the headquarters of the city sanitary service at Pocasset Country Club, Falmouth, yesterday.

OPENS OFFICE
John A. Hayes, conveyancer at the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds, has opened law offices in East Broadway, South Boston. John is a wounded war veteran and a member of Michael J. Perkins Post, American Legion.

PLAN HOLIDAY
Redmond I. Walsh of the street laying-out department and "Tom" Hannon of the central office, public works department in City Hall plan to spend the Labor Day holiday in New York city.

PUBLIC HEARING
The special commission created by the Legislature to study the laws relating to zoning, town planning and billboards and other advertising devices, will hold a series of 10 public hearings, it was announced today, beginning Sept. 15.

On the afternoon of that date, the hearing will be held in Worcester and in the evening at Springfield.

The commission has arranged to inspect billboards while travelling to and from the hearings. Although the so-called billboard case is still pending before the supreme court, and has just been recommitted to the master, the commission will give full consideration to the billboard problem.

Places where other hearings are to be held are: Pittsfield, Sept. 16; Fall River, Sept. 28; New Bedford, Sept. 28; Haverhill, Oct. 2; Lowell, Oct. 2; Boston—zoning, Oct. 6; town planning, Oct. 9; billboards, Oct. 15. All Boston hearings will be held at the State House.

Whip Starvation!

A Five Billion-Dollar Prosperity Loan Will Win the War of 1931

George Washington said:

"In time of peace, prepare for war."

If alive today, Washington would say:

"In time of war, prepare for peace."

This country is at war NOW—at war with poverty and starvation—worse enemies than it has ever faced on the battlefield.

It has been in the trenches of depression more than two years. An army of 6,000,000 men, and at least 12,000,000 women and children, are bearing the brunt of the fighting.

How much longer is this war going to last?

How many more lives must be lost by hunger?

Why can't this great, rich, powerful nation come to grips with the foe?

What on earth is the matter with the President and Congress?

Do they think they can win by slapping the enemy on the wrist?

The net cost of the World War to this country (U. S. Treasury figures) was more than thirty-seven billion dollars.

Does Mr. Hoover mean to tell us that, for a war on starvation, we cannot raise five billion dollars?

Does he mean to say that we cannot MAKE jobs to end this unemployment?

Six billion dollars were offered to the Government this year to float the soldiers' bonus loan. Five billions of those dollars were not needed and are still waiting to be used for a PROSPERITY loan, if the Government will only float it.

A five-billion-dollar prosperity loan for public works would knock the depression out before mid-Winter.

It would furnish a market for labor, a market for material, a stimulant that would pump new life into the business corpse.

It would not be a dole, sapping the energies of the nation and turning laborers into loafers. It would provide honest work for honest workers at HONEST WAGES.

And even if it did not get into full swing for a year or more it would START the recovery, and RECOVERY WHEN STARTED CANNOT BE STOPPED.

The five-billion-dollar prosperity loan, proposed by William Randolph Hearst last June in a nation-wide radio address, is favored by thoughtful labor leaders, by thoughtful business men, by thoughtful economists, by thoughtful citizens.

Only this week the New York State Federation of Labor demanded a special session of Congress to authorize such a bond issue:

"To be used for Federal improvements and to be lent to States and municipalities where needed, thereby enabling employment for a large number of people."

Hundreds of other indorsements of the loan plan have been made since Mr. Hearst proposed it, and at least one important indorsement was heard TWO AND A HALF YEARS BEFORE Mr. Hearst proposed it.

That indorsement was made at Palo Alto, California, by an eminent business man and citizen, who then outlined a vast scheme of public improvements as the main feature of his program for the United States.

The indorser was Herbert Hoover.

Mr. Hoover's program was a glorious one for the nation at any time, but how much more glorious for the nation at THIS time, when eighteen or twenty million of our people don't know whether they will have food, and clothing, and a roof over their heads this Winter.

And how INGLORIOUS in these war days of 1931 is a Government without a program and a President without a program, while the whole nation waits the word to go over the top.

The ammunition, five billion dollars' worth of it, is here.

Come out of your dugouts, Mr. President and gentlemen of the Congress. Bring it up to the firing line.

Do something.

You can win this war with dollars.

YOU WILL NEVER WIN IT WITH WORDS.

By Edgar A. Guest

Just Folks

Two Questions

I sometimes wonder at the last
Just what of us the saints will ask,
When we have closed this earthly task
And to Eternity have passed.

As we sit around some Heavenly fire,
Newcomers to those realms afar
Where all the saints and martyrs are,
I wonder what they will inquire.

I can't imagine they will care
What stocks and bonds are quoted at,
Whose purses now are lean or fat,
Or who is in the governor's chair.

The things we've built our pride upon
And like so well to gossip o'er,
The selfish ends we've battled for
May have no value later on.

Two questions I am sure will come
When once the conversation starts:
"Is hate still breaking human hearts?"
"Are men on earth still quarrelsome?"

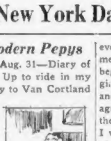
New York Day by Day

Diary of Modern Pepys

NEW YORK, Aug. 31—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up to ride in my new benzine buggy to Van Cortland park which a sta captain told me he found the coolest spot in New York and it was true. And back down Broadway, seeing John Weissmuller, the swimmer, and his bride, Bobbe Arnst, window shopping along.



In the afternoon Henry Sell came and gave the most engaging account I ever heard of Russia and his wanderings there with Gene and Polly Tunney. In especial how loud speakers on street corners hurried the masses to work and the intense, and to me, fanatic fervor over the five year plan.

To dinner at the Atlantic Beach club and among others there were the Jerome Napoleon Bonapartes, Ralph Bloomer, one time football star; Walter Chrysler, Jr., Grover Whalen and a tanned-back lady in filmy black lace pajamas. So home in the starlight singing songs of yesteryear.

* * *

Someone calls it "The Museum of Natural Mystery." Thousands of New Yorkers pass by every day but few know the origin. It is a modernistic red tower on Rvierside Drive at 103d st. and the official name is The Roerich—a sort of "one man museum" built by a Russian named Nicholas K. Roerich about whom little is known.

* * *

I am told 1006 paintings in the museum are by Mr. Roerich, chiefly canvases of an allegorical nature. He has also published books—some of which are given away. A section is given over to esoteric literature of the Far East, each volume cached in especial holy cloth. Some day there are only about a dozen visitors and other times it is well filled. There is a graceful cordiality that makes everyone feel instantly welcome and yet there is something about it that sems eerie—like a Rhine castle of legendary myths.

* * *

A gentleman in my apartment building is an enthusiastic reader of Gertrude Stein. He believes she is a gifted, misunderstood artist. Last evening, he turned down a page for me to read and digest slowly. It began: "in, in beginning, if in beguining, I begin to be connectedly and carefully and collectedly if I agree, if in the beginning I agree, then I agree, you agree, we agree." I will agree only to one thing—one of us is nuts.

* * *

There is more sense and certainly better humor in a headline Earl Mauck sends from a Kentucky weekly: "Victim of Cruel Murder May Live."

* * *

Also a young lady in Atlanta, in a pet at her brother for objecting to her smoking cigarettes, writes: "I am paying no attention to him. He is one of those ultra particular souls who plays football and permits perfect strangers to walk around on his face."

* * *

* * *

In returning to the jagged cusps and campaniles of New York after the smooth architectural splendors of Europe, there is invariably a feeling the city is crazily overbuilt and vulgarly sensational. The skyline is like jazz compared to symphonic rhythm. There is not any very good reason to bust out crying about New York's building artistry but—On second thought I think I'll cry anyway. It is all very terrible.

* * *

To my notion the most beautiful of the structures to shoot up recently is the Radio building on Madison ave. The Empire and Chrysler kindle the imagination momentarily but otherwise leave me cold.

* * *

A note from Frank Sullivan at his home town, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., tells of galloping there to get away from New York heat and running into thunderstorms of which he is deathly afraid. One bolt plays about his bedroom every night. "I'll get it yet," he adds, "if I have to dig up old Ben Franklin."

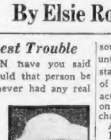
Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

The Greatest Trouble

HOW OFTEN have you said this?—"Why should that person be unhappy? He's never had any real trouble."



Elsie Robinson

But the greatest trouble on earth is never to have had any real trouble.

"You don't believe that? You don't believe that trouble is necessary or helpful? You feel that normal lives should be happy lives and that trouble's unnatural, a dreadful penalty or mistake!

You're wrong. Trouble is as normal and necessary as happiness. It may be hard to take but it is a sort of vitamin for the character and the man who doesn't have it, gets spiritual rickets.

The less trouble the average human has, the more stupid and self-centered he is going to be. Just try and interest him in your personal misfortune! Does he warm with understanding sympathy and offer you a helping hand? No indeed! He listens with cold indifference or assumes a patronizing expression and tells you how you should have avoided your predicament. Worse yet, he may assure you that he "knows just how you feel, dearie," and proceed to pester your harassed spirit with an endless recital of some pee-wee irritation.

And, if you really want to start something, try to tell one of these untroubled Lives that he's lucky. Instantly he will bust into big bleats of self-pity to prove that he is actually the most miserable soul on earth and that Fate has shortchanged him.

And it has!

Remember the old verse—"Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth?"

Whom life loveth it challengeth!—that's the modern version of that verse.

Trouble is life's challenge to a human soul. It is a challenge to all a man has in him in strength and courage, intelligence and self-control. Trouble is also an invitation . . . an invitation to explore the tall adventures of danger and hardship, the immortal mysteries of pain and grief. We will never come to the end of those adventures, we will never be able to understand those mysteries, within the little span of our human experience. But, unless we have tried to explore, unless we have tried to understand, we can never know what life's is all about.

The man who has not known trouble, has not known life.

That man is poor. He may have gold in his pocket but he will have nothing but pink wadding in his brain and heart.

He is also humiliated. He is still in the position of a child, for trouble is a grown-up experience and the man who had not known trouble has no place with grown-ups. He has been left behind while other men have gone forward into the jungle darkness of a great journey.

Do not envy those who have never known trouble. Pity them!

Unless Statute Conforms to Custom, It Is No Law!

IN the course of the discussion about laws and their enforcement that has gone on continually in our land ever since the adoption of prohibition, I have often called to mind a picturesque phrase uttered by Mirabeau in a speech in the Constituent Assembly of 1789. He had lost patience with the pedantry and dogmatism of the doctrinaires and metaphysicians in that body, and burst out with: "We are not a savage tribe arriving on the banks of the Orinoco to found a new society. We are an old nation—too old, perhaps—with pre-existing laws, pre-existing customs, and a pre-existing civilization."

The same sort of doctrinaires, as sincere, no doubt, as the metaphysicians of 1789, and differing from them only in the panaces they offer, have got us in their clutches and propose to make us all over on their own model.

They innocently believe in what Burke called the "mysterious virtue of wax and parchment," and are possessed by the amazing superstition that anything and everything can be done by what they call law.

Whenever anything goes wrong, whenever anything happens that annoys us or offends our prejudices, we commonly exclaim: "There ought to be a law against it!"

Our moral pedants proceed upon the theory that anything they wish may be automatically accomplished by the enactment of a statute. They thought that, if they could only get the Constitution amended so as to enable Congress to enact a statute, they could prohibit alcohol.

BUT THEY COULDN'T PROHIBIT ALCOHOL ANY MORE THAN THEY COULD PROHIBIT ACID, OR DEW, OR RAIN, OR SNOW OR ICE.

All they could do was to annihilate, by a stroke of the pen, the existing statutes regulating the distribution and consumption of alcohol, and decree that it should no longer be distributed or consumed. And as they could NOT destroy the demand for it, alcohol continued to be distributed though under another system and in a different way.

IT IS, ALAS, THE VERY WORST SYSTEM THAT COULD BE IMAGINED.

The demand for spirits remains as widespread and keen as ever, and enormous profits are offered to those who will take the increased risks of supplying it.

A new and formidable industry is founded, and a new order of crime created. And since our foreign critics fail to distinguish between the old, private, individual crimes that are characteristic of all countries, and the new, public and social crimes that prohibition has made possible and inevitable in ours, the BRIGANDAGE THAT DISGRACES OUR CITIES GIVES US ABROAD THE SINISTER REPUTATION OF BEING THE MOST LAWLESS NATION IN THE WORLD.

Some interesting statistics about lawmaking in America were recently published; the figures showed that the whole number of laws, federal, state and municipal, on the statute books of the United States amounts to some 2,500,000. All of which moved a foreign critic to say that America had MORE LAW and MORE LAWLESSNESS than any other nation in the world.

Are we really more lawless than any other people?

We move in multitudes like sheep, and march and countermarch in vast and solemn masses, in a way unknown in other countries.

If we almost automatically obey all of these unofficial and anonymous voices, how does it happen that we have such an unfortunate reputation as law-breakers?

As a matter of fact, WE DO NOT DESERVE THAT REPUTATION. We have more statutes, to be sure, than any other nation in the world, and we have more crimes defined in them; but it does not follow that, because we have more statutes, we have more law; nor, because we have more crimes defined in our statutes, then we have more crime.

We seem to have more law because we have more statutes, and we have more statutes because we have more Parliaments; other countries have only one, whilst we have forty-nine, running full blast all the time.

And then we have more cranks and reformers incessantly trying to improve and perfect our morals, not by the spiritual means of persuasion and reason and example, but by the profane means of violence.

Here are two acts that are considered immoral in all other civilized countries in the world, are made criminal in America. The result is that not all of these two million statutes are obeyed and respected, and they are not laws; they are simply statutes, and all or most of the trouble about the enforcement of law in America comes from the persistent refusal to recognize the distinction between a statute and a law.

There are certain acts which the conscience of mankind, the collective opinion of all civilized nations, condemn as wrong.

These acts fall into certain easily defined categories; everyone knows what they are, and doesn't have to look into the statute books to find out; all he has to do is to look into his own heart, for he knows the difference between right and wrong. They are acts that no one, anywhere, can commit without a feelng of guilt.

They are wrong in and of themselves—mal in se, as the lawyers call them. There is no great difficulty in enforcing laws that enact penalties for deeds of this kind. All men are agreed about them, and are united in a common effort to punish those who commit them.

Even those charged with having committed these offenses do not deny the justice of the law, they merely deny their culpability, or advance some excuse to make their case an exception to the general rule. That is, humanity in general is unanimous, or practically unanimous, in upholding the codes that define these offenses and exact penalties for their commission.

These enactments are the record of the customary rules recognized by the community as binding. In the good old phrase, they are the law of the land, and, so far as respect for the law of the land is concerned, the AMERICAN PEOPLE ARE AS LAW-ABIDING AS ANY IN THE WORLD.

But, since we have forty-nine Parliaments constantly functioning, and since, as the old parliamentarian said, whenever the Commons have nothing else to do they can always make a new crime, we have a mass of statutory enactment that is not a part of the law of the land, enactments that vast sections of the population DO NOT RESPECT and WILL NOT OBEY, and that CANNOT BE ENFORCED.

They do not respect these enactments because they know that the deeds declared to be wrong are not wrong, and it is impossible by the use of force, however strong or violent, to impose upon the moral sense of the people a feeling that a given act is wrong just because those whose prejudices it offends have been able to induce a legislature to enact it into what is called a "law."

It is not a law, in a democracy at least, or in any other form of government for that matter, UNLESS IT HAS THE SANCTION OF THE PEOPLE. IS IMPLICIT IN THEIR LIVES, AND HAS ITS ROOTS DEEP DOWN IN THEIR HABITS AND CUSTOMS.

Custom is the supreme law in all communities, civilized or savage, and UNLESS THE STATUTE CONFORMS TO THIS CUSTOM IT IS NO LAW, that is, in the sense of law in the land. A criminal statute that seeks to regulate personal habits will not work unless it has the sanction of practically all of the people, and is therefore in harmony with the public opinion.

Men do not fear the penalties of the law half so much as they fear public opinion, which for them is the opinion of their neighbors; the statute indeed may disapprove their conduct, but unless their neighbors disapprove it, then, so far as that community is concerned, it is a dead letter.

Juries will not convict, and neighbors will not play the spy and informers, for among men of decency and honor this is one of the things that are SIMPLY NOT DONE. That this is beginning to find recognition was shown when it was announced that a fund of $50,000,000 was to be raised for the purpose of conducting an "educational campaign," extending over a period of ten years, in favor of prohibition.

If the people believed in the prohibitory statutes, there would have been no insuperable difficulty in enforcing them, and no necessity for an educational campaign.

But the trouble with the reformers is that they are always getting the cart before the horse. They imagine that they can change the custom by changing the statute; BUT THEY CAN'T; they must change the custom first. That, of course, is a terribly hard thing to do, and probably the reason why they prefer to change the statute; they find it so much easier.
